House Committee Adopts Bulkley Resolution but Democrats Vote Down Attempts to Abolish Secret Conferences

OVERTURES ARE MADE

Representative Hayes of California, One of Minority Members, Makes Plea for Non-Partisan Consideration

WASHINGTON—Open public committee meetings, but secret Democratic conferences was the program adopted today for consideration in the House of the administration currency reform bill.

By a vote of 11 to five, the banking committee voted for open meetings of the full committee, but by a straight party vote, it defeated a plan proposed by the Republicans for joint non-partisan consideration of the bill.

Those voting against having any sessions of the full committee open were Chairman Glass and Representatives Korbly of Indiana, Brown of West Virginia, Wilson of Florida and Weaver, Oklahoma, all Democrats. The Republicans voted solidly for the "open door" policy.

The vote came upon the favorable report of the "publicity" resolution of Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, approved by the sub-committee headed by Representative Bulkley of Ohio. The Bulkley report was adopted, but gives the committee the right at any time, by a four fifths vote to close the full committee hearings.

Republican overtures were made to the committee by Representative Hayes of California. He pleaded for non-partisan consideration of the bill, but his motion to have Democrats, Republicans and Progressives all meet daily to consider the bill and abolish the secret Democratic conferences was voted down.

Democratic members of the committee will begin to hold night sessions on the bill this evening.

Currency legislation in the Senate will be on a non-partisan basis if the present plans of Chairman Owen of the banking and currency committee are adopted. He has called a meeting of the full committee for tomorrow, which he expects will be the first of the daily meetings for consideration of the Wilson-McAdoo-Glass-Owen bill.

"The finance committee has finished consideration of the tariff bill," said Senator Owen today, "and I thought the way clear to commence on currency. I expect all the meetings to be of the full committee, and while we expect to make this a party measure, the party assuming responsibility for lifting the burden of an inadequate financial system, we hope it will be a non-partisan measure, for there are many Republicans as earnestly in favor of banking reform as we are and who will as readily join in producing a good measure. The members will act as individuals in the committee and will not divide on party lines."

Senator Owen said he expected the committee meetings would shortly be followed by public hearings. The inference now is that the Democrats plan to have the currency bill analyzed and passed through the committee while the House committee is conducting its deliberations, in order to have the bill with the Senate committee report ready to bring into the Senate without delay, as soon as the tariff bill is disposed of in that body.

An automatic alarm first sounded from the burning building. Traffic from North station was delayed for about an hour on account of the fire.

RETURNING VETERANS PRAISE
GETTYSBURG'S CELEBRATION

Massachusetts veterans who have returned from Gettysburg have nothing but praise for the reunion. "There is nothing that could have shown so clearly the good feeling between the old soldiers of the North and South," and "why was it never thought of before?" are remarks commonly heard.

When asked how the camp seemed in contrast with that of war days one of the Boston delegation answered by reading the breakfast menu for one day of bread and butter, oatmeal, fried potatoes and boiled eggs as compared with hardtack 50 years ago.

The able way in which the camp was administered under Maj. J. E. Normolye was remarked upon by several.

To illustrate the fraternity between the soldiers of the different sides the Massachusetts delegates tell of the reception they received from the southerners when they serendipitously came camp with their band. J. B. Lewis of Boston, post 113, said he has never seen such a manifestation, although he has attended almost every great G. A. R. reunion.

"The veterans met another army at Gettysburg besides the southerners," said Mr. Lewis, "who showed them every attention and added a great deal to the

Dr. Naon, Minister of Country to United States, Is Host at Luncheon at Copley Plaza on Anniversary of Independence

NOTABLES ATTEND

Celebrating the ninety-seventh anniversary of the signing of Argentina's declaration of independence, 100 guests of Dr. Romulo S. Naon, minister of the Argentine Republic to the United States, gathered today at a luncheon at the Copley Plaza hotel.

Officers of the visiting Argentine training ship, Presidente Sarmiento, members of the commission supervising the construction of the South American republic's dreadnought Rivadavia at Fore River, Mayor Fitzgerald, William McKissack, the Argentine consul at Boston, United States army and navy officers, government, state and city officials and business men were present.

The local navy yard was represented by Capt. Joseph W. Oman, captain of the yard, who in the absence of Capt. De Witt Coffman at the conference of commandants in Washington is acting as commandant; Commander William D. Brotherton, aide to the commandant; Capt. Spencer S. Wood, commanding the battleship Nebraska; Capt. Frank W. Kellogg of the North Carolina; Lieut. Frederick V. McNair, executive officer of the Chester, and Capt. John D. McDonald, commander of the Virginia. These officers were accompanied by their aides.

Capt. Jose Moneta, head of the sub naval commission at Quincy and commander of the Rivadavia, Capt. Horacio Ballve of the Presidente Sarmiento, Lieut. Exequiel M. Real de Azua and other Argentine naval officers were busy at work in Dr. Naon's suite of rooms on the fourth floor of the Copley Plaza during the morning.

Early today, Dr. Naon left the hotel and went aboard the Presidente Sarmiento. The ship was gallily decorated with bunting and it was a gala occasion for officers, naval cadets and enlisted men. After inspection, the band began to play the national hymns of the Argentine Republic and every man aboard from the highest to the most humble, sang.

A cablegram was received by Dr. Naon from Buenos Aires today saying that President Roque Saenz Pena of the Argentine Republic had left that city on a special train for Tucuman, in the north, where the declaration of independence was signed. A large party accompanied him. They will hold exercises at the house, still standing, in which the historic document was written.

NEW HAVEN R. R. FREIGHT SERVICE POOR; PASSENGER
FAIR, SAYS FEDERAL BOARDM. McDONALD TO HEAD B. & M. WITH
MR. MELLEEN OUT

President of the Maine Central Is to Take the Place Just Vacated by Head of the New England Railroad System

REASONS MADE PUBLIC

Directors of the Maine Central railroad are meeting in Portland today to elect Morris McDonald, now vice president and general manager of that road, as its new president, replacing Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven system, who has just announced his retirement from the presidency of the Boston & Maine and Maine Central lines. The directors of the Boston & Maine are to meet a week from today to elect Mr. McDonald to the presidency of that system.

Mr. Mellen continues in the boards of directors and executive committees of both the Boston & Maine and Maine Central roads. The New Haven management, however, announces that one man cannot handle three roads satisfactorily with equal justice and hence Mr. Mellen is to devote himself entirely to the New Haven system as the largest and most important of the three roads.

The statement given out by the publicity department of the New Haven further says that this move in no way means that the New Haven has lost its interest in the affairs of the other New England roads. Mr. Mellen, it says, will devote his full time to the New Haven and its direct subsidiaries.

Many close followers of the New England railroad situation maintain that the retirement of Mr. Mellen from active leadership of the two large New England lines controlled by the New Haven is indicative of his ultimate resignation of similar duties on the Connecticut roads and at no very distant date.

Commissioner Prouty's indorsement of Mr. McDonald, taken from the report of the interstate commerce commission, issued today:

"There is no need, moreover, to go outside of New England, nor outside this railroad family itself, to find a satisfactory record which may be used as the standard of what a proper service should be. The Maine Central Railroad has in the past been operated as an independent property, and its operation has been very satisfactory to its patrons. Practically no complaints have been received from that section, and the record of freight movement between Portland and points on the Maine Central is extremely good."

Mr. McDonald of Portland, Me. has been "railroading" continuously since November, 1883, when he became a member of the engineering corps of the Kentucky & Indiana Bridge Company. From Jan. 1, 1885, to December, 1892, he was with the Louisville, Evansville & St. Louis railroad as paymaster, assistant treasurer, chief clerk, superintendent, train master and superintendent of transportation, successively.

From January, 1893, to January, 1894, he was with Central Railroad of Georgia at Savannah as chief clerk to superintendent and assistant trainmaster in charge of the Savannah division.

It was early in the year of 1896 that he came to Maine and the Maine Central railroad in answer to the call of Vice-President Evans, with whom he was associated in the railroad business since 1884, with the exception of a couple of years.

Interstate Commerce Commission Says Railroad Company Wasted Millions in Financial Operations

B. & A. SHOULD BE FREE

Relief of Situation Said to Lie With Road—Told to Obey Intent as Well as the Letter of the Law

WASHINGTON—That the New Haven and Boston & Maine passenger service is generally good, safety of operation not being considered; that freight service is inferior; that freight rates compare favorably with the average in official classification territory; that passenger fares are very favorable to the local traveling public; that the outside financial operations of the New Haven company for the last nine years have been wasteful, but that while expenditure on the road and equipment has been with a free hand there is nothing to show that it has not been wisely made, and much to indicate that the result has fully justified the outlay the interstate commerce commission asserts in its report on the New England railroad system, made public today.

"The financial condition of this (New Haven) company," says the commission, "calls for careful consideration and prudent action, but gives no occasion for hysteria."

Among the chief features of the report are recommendations that the New Haven divest itself of its trolley lines, that the Boston & Albany be kept entirely free from New Haven control; an opinion that the so-called merger between the New Haven and Boston & Maine has proved an economical mistake, and an announcement that the investigation as to tariffs on the Boston & Maine system will be continued.

The report urges as a remedy to improve the railroad situation in New England "rest and an opportunity for constructive work." The commission in its report says of a remedy:

"No railroad management can succeed without the support of the public which it serves. It must never be forgotten that the railroad is a public servant in fact as well as in name, and that the service which it renders depends largely upon the treatment which it receives from its master."

"But upon what terms is peace to be secured? In the past the New Haven Company, which has now become the dominant factor and which is mainly to be considered, has proceeded in open violation of some laws and in disregard of the spirit, if not the letter, of others."

"This course upon the part of that company is primarily responsible for this unfortunate agitation. That agitation can not stop, and ought not to stop, until its cause is removed. Any betterment of railroad conditions in New England must begin with the assurance that the New Haven management will act

TRAINMEN AND MANAGERS TO MEET ONCE MORE

NEW YORK—Final action is with the general committee of 1000 of the Order of Railroad Conductors and Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen on the recent vote in favor of a strike and a meeting is to be held Saturday. Next Monday the managers of the 53 eastern railroads, upon whom the demands for wage increases have been made by the unions, meet and the roads are expected then to give their final answer.

The Erie railroad and its two underlying corporations on Tuesday declined to take any further part in the negotiations. It was said it could not pay the $1,200,000 which the incurred wages would total.

Following the report of the representatives of the unions on Tuesday that 94 per cent of the men had voted to strike if increased wages were not paid to them all overtures to and dealings with the railroads ended.

Five days will be spent there, and the party will leave July 16 for Niagara Falls, where three days will be given to visiting the country in the neighborhood.

Toronto will be the next stopping place, two days being set apart for the visit to that city. From there the teachers will go to Kingston, which they will reach July 23. On that day the party will leave by lake steamer and sail through the Thousand Islands.

July 24 and 25 will be spent in Montreal, and on July 25 the party will sail for home, arriving in Glasgow, Scotland, about Aug. 4.

Russian Duma Refuses to Make Apology to the Government

DUMA WILL NOT MAKE APOLOGY TO GOVERNMENT

Complete Breach With Ministry Caused by the Refusal of Russian House to Accept Responsibility for Member

CHARGE IS RESENTED

(Special to the Monitor)

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia.—A complete breach at present exists between the government and the Imperial Duma. The government has resolved that neither ministers nor heads of departments should appear in the House, until such conditions are secured as will safeguard representatives of the government from insult.

The immediate cause of this decision was the conduct of M. Markoff, a member of the extreme Right, during a debate on the estimates of the ministry of finance, who interjected the remark that stealing could not be tolerated, and then went on to explain that what he had said not only applied to the finance department but to all the other departments of state. As a consequence of M. Markoff's refusal to withdraw, the heads of all departments and the representatives of the government on the ministerial tribune immediately left the Duma in a body.

The great majority of the Duma refuse to indorse any declaration by the president on behalf of the House, which could be construed into an apology for M. Markoff's conduct, for which it declares M. Markoff alone is responsible. It is now generally admitted that a dissolution of the Duma in consequence of M. Markoff's remarks is impossible, and herein lies the strength of the Constitutionalists. It is possible that a solution of the difficulty may be found by increasing the penalties for verbal excesses in the Duma.

SECOND WEEK OF FLYING AT VIENNA

(Special to the Monitor)

VIENNA, Austria.—The Viennese flying week held on the Aspern flying ground opened very successfully. A crowd of some fifty thousand or sixty thousand people was present.

Although the interest in these meetings is considerably less than last year the performances of the Frenchman, Chevillard, called forth shouts of astonishment and admiration. All the pilots showed the utmost discipline and complete control of their machines. French pilots predominated in nearly all the competitions, and one of them, Perreyon, created a new world record in high flying with two passengers, flying to the height of 4600 meters, thereby beating Lieutenant von Blatschke's world record established just a year ago, also at the Aspern flying ground in Vienna.

The losses on both sides are reported to have been considerable, but it is hoped that this engagement may break the resistance to the Italian advance in Cyrenaica, which has been largely organized by the Senussi.

FUNDS FOR PEACE CELEBRATION ARE NOW BEING ASKED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON.—The British committee which is organizing in Great Britain the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of peace among English speaking peoples has just issued an appeal for funds. So far the proposals of the committee, as explained by Earl Grey at a public meeting at the Mansion house on Dec. 18, last, include:

1. The erection of a memorial of the one hundredth anniversary of peace in Westminster abbey.
2. The purchase of Sulgrave Manor, Northants, the ancestral home of the Washington family, and its maintenance as a place of pilgrimage for Americans in England and as a fruitful symbol of the kinship of the two peoples. An option on the historic property has been secured.
3. The foundation of a permanent chair of Anglo-American history and the endowment of a scheme of annual prizes in the elementary and secondary schools for essays on topics germane to the objects of the celebration.

This program will cost between £50,000 and £60,000, and the committee desire to raise the whole of this sum during the present year so as to carry out these proposals at once, and thus clear the way for a further program of international festivities two years hence.

BISMARCK RELICS SELDOM VISITED

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN.—The Bismarck museum, which was opened in 1891, seems to become more and more neglected, writes a recent visitor. On a bright sunny morning he was the only person who took the trouble of traveling to this place of German national interest. In the afternoon one more visitor arrived.

The major-domo complained bitterly of the ever decreasing number of people. Few people seem to have any idea where Schoenhausen is, and even many well educated are not aware that such a museum exists at Schoenhausen, which is the second station past Stendal on the Hanover-Berlin route. The place is, however, well worth a visit. The museum itself is not in the old country house in which Bismarck was born, but is about five minutes from it, in a large building which, together with an estate of 500 acres, once belonged to the Bismarck family, and was rebought by the nation, and presented to Prince Bismarck.

Apart from a fine ethnographical collection, a present from the explorer and natural scientist, Wolff, the museum contains about 1500 objects, chiefly gifts from German towns. Amongst these are the presentations of the freedom of no fewer than 420 towns, and 218 presents of objects of art, and beautiful examples of German industrial art and bookbinding. There is also the chair on which Napoleon III. sat when discussing the terms of capitulation at Sedan, and many simple gifts from simple German folk, many of them accompanied by apophorems. To visit the place is to live over again a piece of the world's history.

DOUGLAS KNOOP HAS FELLOWSHIP

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON.—Douglas Knoop, M. A., lecturer in economics at the University of Sheffield, was recently appointed fellow of the English foundation, at a meeting of the trustees of the Albert Kahn traveling fellowships. These fellowships are of the value of £600.

The object of the founder, Albert Kahn of Paris, was to enable persons selected from among the leaders of those engaged, in whatever way, in the education of different nations to improve the quality of their work by becoming personally acquainted with other countries than their own. The fellowships are therefore used to enable the fellows to travel round the world.

The trustees are the lord chancellor, the lord chief justice, the speaker, a trustee nominated by the founder, and the principal of the University of London. The University of London administers the affairs of the trust, and the fellows are elected from a list of candidates nominated by the vice-chancellors of the universities of the United Kingdom, and by the presidents of the Royal Society and the British Academy.

BELGIAN FORCES INADEQUATE FOR WAR SAYS DEPUTY

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS.—The Belgian correspondent of the Temps, commenting on the military reform schemes in that country, touches on the question of the defense of Luxembourg.

In the Belgian chamber the statement was made by Herbert Speyer that the present defense scheme did not guarantee the preservation of the integrity of Belgian territory, since the grand duchy would not be actually defended by the Belgian army.

M. Speyer considers that the whole of the Belgian force would in case of war be taken up by the defense of central Belgium without leaving any reserve troops for the defense of the right bank of the Maas.

The Belgian army being needed between Antwerp and Liege on account of the German fortresses, German troops could cross the province of Luxembourg without being met by further resistance than that opposed by the territorial corps which is to be organized as a covering force to Belgian mobilization.

From this M. Speyer concludes that the invasion of Luxembourg, the most direct route to the French frontier, would be an accomplished fact before the Belgian central army could reach the right bank of the Maas.

That Luxembourg is the weak point of the Belgian defense, the Temps correspondent continues, there is no doubt, the only remedy to this defect being the organization of a "direct military action" on the right bank of the Maas, an organization which could only take place by an extension of military service in the country.

TOWNS TO FORM GREATER SYDNEY

(Special to the Monitor)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Aus.—At a royal commission, presided over by the lord mayor, which sat at Sydney, it was proposed at an early date to make an inspection of the metropolitan area so as to investigate the conditions and development of each of the suburbs, and their relation to the inner city.

The commission called a number of witnesses regarding the areas, or parts of areas, which it proposed to inclose within Greater Sydney, and all of the suburban councils interested were given an opportunity of submitting their views to the commission. The report to be furnished to the New South Wales government by the royal commission will form the basis of a bill for presentation to Parliament in the approaching session.

FRENCH FLAG ON ISLANDS

(Special to the Monitor)

MELBOURNE, Vic., Aus.—A telegram received in Melbourne announces the hoisting of the French flag on Wallis and Fortuna islands in accordance with the wishes of the chiefs. The islands have long been under French protection.

MOROCCO IS IN RESTLESS STATE

(Special to the Monitor)

TANGIER, Morocco.—According to the latest information from Gibraltar, the D company of the second battalion of the Lincolnshire regiment, which is stationed there, has been ordered to be ready at a moment's notice to go to Tangier if required. Officers' leave from the garrison to Tangier has been stopped. Spanish troops are continually leaving Algeiras for the Moroccan coast.

The position in the Spanish zone continues to be serious. A sharp engagement took place recently between the Spanish troops and a large body of tribesmen, who were only repulsed after a very prolonged encounter, which involved considerable loss on both sides. The French and Spanish governments have, it is understood, arrived at an agreement to afford each other mutual support to suppress the contraband traffic in arms.

FRENCH PETITION TURKISH SULTAN

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France.—The League of the Rights of Man has, in the name of its president, Francis de Pressense, sent a telegram to the Sultan on the recent wholesale arrests in Constantinople occasioned by the killing of Shevket Pasha.

The telegram read as follows: "May your majesty give leave to 60,000 French citizens, sincere friends of Turkey, to call upon the sense of justice of that country. Public opinion in Europe would be nonplussed should the Turkish government proceed, in the reign of a Sultan, a friend of justice and progress, to order wholesale arrests, put suspects to the torture, and order the execution of accused persons, regardless of their rights of self-defense. A policy of terror has never been conducive to the welfare of states. Nothing would be more deplorable than to make a political crime the pretext for illegal actions, and to make use of it to wipe out opposition."

TANGIER UNEASY AS SPANISH GUNS BOMBARD COAST

(Special to the Monitor)

MADRID, Spain.—News from the Spanish zone continues to be serious. The bombardment of the Anjera coast by Spanish warships has created considerable uneasiness in Tangier owing to the proximity of the scene of these operations to the international enclave of Tangier, and this uneasiness was considerably increased owing to the failure of the Spanish authorities to issue any notification that such an action was contemplated.

Owing to the fact that the Spanish zone surrounds the land frontier of the international enclave, Tangier is cut off from all communication with the interior as long as the present state of disorder lasts, and as a consequence all trade in this direction is at a standstill.

It is understood that the Spanish government has approached the French authorities with a view to obtaining their cooperation in dealing with the present outbreak. This will not involve the presence of French troops in the Spanish zone, as the French action will probably be confined to preventing any contiguous French territory being used by the rebels as a base for their operations.

As already pointed out, the Moroccan policy of the government is distinctly unpopular. At Barcelona a meeting of protest organized by the Republicans was prohibited by the governor, and a procession through the streets had to be dispersed by the civil guard.

MEN TO MANAGE AN EMPIRE IMPERALLY SAID TO BE NEED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON.—Sidney Low, who delivered the last of the series of lectures in connection with King's College on colonial problems chose as his subject, "The Problem of an Imperial Executive."

The 15,000,000 or 16,000,000 of Britons overseas were spectators, he said, of the drama of empire, in which the actors were the other 45,000,000 Britons in the European islands. It did not seem likely that this constitution of the empire could be final.

In the defense committee they had an instrument for imperial cooperation which was already in good working order. Nominally it dealt only with questions of defense, but defense was closely interwoven with foreign policy, and touched also on cable communications, commerce protection, maritime trade routes, and other problems.

The second of the new instruments was the imperial conference, which, however, was still a purely advisory body. But, while the tendencies embodied in these institutions were slowly maturing, the necessity of an Imperial executive had to be met.

The point had been reached when they seemed to need certain ministers to transact the joint affairs of the realm—an imperial premier or chancellor to advise on these subjects, which were the business of the empire rather than of the nation; and imperial ministers for foreign affairs, for defense, for finance, and for communications. These, with other officers, would form an empire cabinet.

As a fact, during the past few years the prime minister had had to take upon himself many of the functions of an imperial chancellor. The foreign secretary was so far recognized as an imperial officer that he was allowed to communicate confidential information to the state governments which he had not given to his own Parliament; and the first lord of the admiralty seemed to be drifting toward the status of an imperial minister of defense.

He presumed that in these matters they would follow their rather sensible British custom of doing things and then discovering that they had done it. Then after a time they would discover that the two functions could not conveniently be exercised by the same persons and they would proceed to separate them. They would leave the British cabinet to deal with British affairs and then have an empire executive competent to advise the Crown on imperial business.

HALL CAINE SEES UNIQUE MERIT OF SEVENPENNY BOOK

(Special to the Monitor)

TORQUAY, England.—Hall Caine spoke at the annual dinner of the Associated Booksellers at the Grand hotel, Torquay, recently, on the subject of the sevenpenny book.

He said it was to master the passion for reading books without buying them that publishers started the sevenpenny book. He could say without fear that there was nothing to compare with the British sevenpenny book in any other part of the world. Its influence in educating, as well as amusing the public was incalculable. If, in course of time, the British public was not the most widely read public in the world it would not be the fault of British book sellers and publishers, who were giving them the masterpieces of literature, beautifully printed and bound at a small cost.

Speaking of the economic aspect of the sevenpenny book, Mr. Caine said that, within a few months of the time when they had bought a six shilling edition of a book, booksellers were asked to sell a sevenpenny edition of it and were hurt both in the low profits of the sevenpenny book and in the short period given them to sell the six shilling book. He thought that was a very shortsighted policy on the part of authors and publishers. Booksellers ought to have a longer period in which to sell the six shilling book in order that they might be induced to buy and stock it.

SOCIALISTS OPPOSE THREE-YEAR BILL FOR FRENCH ARMY

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France.—An attempt was made by the Socialists to interrupt the course of the debate on the three-years' service bill by proposing a scheme for the establishment of an international parliament.

The mover of the resolution was Francois Fournier, deputy of Nimes. He was supported by the signatures of 40 other deputies. M. Fournier's speech was packed with quotations from authorities on international law, and it was evident that the House was not in a mood to give him a protracted hearing.

M. Pichon, in reply to the speech, said that France was a supporter of the principle of arbitration, but that both Germany and Austria had rejected any proposals in that direction.

It was necessary to have right on one's side, but it was also necessary to have the power to enforce what one was standing for. M. Fournier's resolution for an international parliament was rejected by 419 votes to 142.

Turkey Tries to Pacify Syria Before France Can Intervene

TURKS UNEASY LEST FRENCH INTERVENTION COME IN SYRIA

(Special to the Monitor)
BEIRUT, Syria—The Turkish government is in obvious uneasiness over the condition of Syria, and apparently has some fear of French intervention.

About a month ago Kiamil Pasha came to Beirut but he only remained a little over a week. Two stories were given to account for his visit, the first that he was in search of an asylum, which is probably inaccurate; the other, and probably the true one, that he was commissioned by the government in Constantinople to see what he could do to check the revolutionary spirit which is beginning to pervade Syria, and to persuade the people to accept the conditions of reform offered to them.

He had been known as a sympathizer with revolutionary measures, and so it was thought that if he became the spokesman on the other side an effective way would have been found of damping the spirits of the leaders.

A little after him came Shukri Pasha, the famous commandant of Adrianople during the siege. It is said that no less than 20,000 Turkish troops are being sent to strengthen his command, so great is the fear that France may announce her intention of occupying Syria owing to the disorder there.

Hilmi Pasha is also on his way to the Lebanon. It is intended that he should carry out reforms in the manner he carried them out in Macedonia, where he seems to have succeeded in disbursing the funds provided for the purpose without accomplishing anything of any moment.

a method evidently highly satisfactory to the Porte.

In the meantime the factories have again got to work, owing to the fact that the silk worms in the plains have spun their cocoons, and so there is less distress and unrest.

Those who tended the silk worms whilst they were feeding are now engaged in selling "jizzy." This consists of the old dried mulberry leaves which are left on the trays when the silk worms have finished feeding.

As the worms grow bigger the people put small twigs with leaves on the trays instead of single leaves. Fresh food is put on top of these, but the old is not removed. Consequently by the time the silk worms spin their cocoons there is quite a pile of old leaves on each tray.

This is sold as dry food for cattle, at about 55 piastres a donkey-load, and is considered one of the most important cattle foods in the country.

The year has been a good one for the silk worms, and the silk crop is much more plentiful than last year. If the price of silk is maintained it will be, therefore, a prosperous one for the peasants.

When these peasants have been successful with their silk worms they decorate the donkeys, mules, and camels which bring the loads to the factories with blue beads, branches of pine, and plum blossom. The price of silk in all probability, therefore, rather than Shukri Pasha's bayonets may be the deciding factor in pacifying the country in the immediate future.

PRINCE'S LETTER SETS FORTH HIS RIGHT TO THRONE

(Special to the Monitor)
BERLIN, Germany—Both before the recent wedding of Prince Ernest Augustus and Princess Victoria Louise and since that time complaints have been made that the situation with regard to the Duke of Cumberland and Brunswick is not as clear as it ought to be, in view of the assumption of the throne of Brunswick by Prince and Princess Ernest Augustus.

When the throne of Brunswick reverted in 1884 to the Duke of Cumberland the federal council decided that, as the Duke of Cumberland had refused to recognize the Kingdom of Hanover as a province of Prussia and still insisted that he was King of Hanover, neither he nor any member of his family should be allowed to ascend the throne of Brunswick. The Duke of Hanover has not renounced his rights to the Kingdom of Hanover, so that, strictly speaking, Prince Ernest Augustus cannot ascend the throne. Pressure has been put on the government to make the situation clear, and the result is the publication in the semi-official North-German Gazette of a letter written to the imperial chancellor by Prince Ernest Augustus on April 20.

Prince Ernest informs the imperial chancellor in this letter that his father, the Duke of Cumberland, in the expectation of the federal council's decision of 1885 and 1907 being annulled, had decided to convey to Prince Ernest his rights to the government in the Duchy of Brunswick.

Recent events, the letter points out, had altered the situation on which the decisions of the federal council were based and which prevented a member of the Hanoverian branch of the Guelph family assuming the government of Brunswick. Among these recent occurrences was the betrothal of the writer to Princess Victoria Louise. With the consent of his father, also, he had asked for an appointment as officer in the Prussian army and had sworn fealty and obedience to the Emperor.

These things implied the promise that he would do nothing and would support nothing which aimed at altering the possessions of Prussia, and these things justified the repeal of the federal council's decisions.

MANY MILLIONS IN RESPONSE TO KAISER'S WISH

(Special to the Monitor)
BERLIN, Germany—It will be remembered that on the occasion of the jubilee celebrations the Kaiser expressed his willingness to accept any sums that might be collected for charities and other purposes in the interest of the people's welfare, while he declined all presents for himself.

This has led to surprising results. The money that has poured in from all sides in honor of his majesty's jubilee is estimated at 70,000,000 marks.

Many of the donors have expressed the wish that the money should be devoted to the benefit of artisans, others have especially named the old soldiers of Germany as those to be benefited.

Not only the German municipalities and other corporations and many private persons have given liberally, but the Germans abroad have also proved very generous in showing their loyalty. The Germans in New York alone have subscribed $50,000 for a German hospital.

Many foreigners have also desired to honor the Emperor, among them being a Russian millionaire, who has begged his majesty's acceptance of 500,000 marks for any charity he wishes to benefit.

TWENTY MEMBERS FROM PARLIAMENT FOR TRIP ABROAD

(Special to the Monitor)
WESTMINSTER—On July 16, 20 members of Parliament, representing both houses, will leave Liverpool by the Allan liner Victoria on a visit to Canada, New Zealand and Australia.

The party will include Liberal, Conservative and Labor members. At the annual meeting of the British branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association, which was held at the House of Commons, under the presidency of the speaker in April last, a communication was read from the Australian branch of the association inviting 20 members of the British Parliament to visit Australia this year.

The tour which will commence on July 16 is the outcome of this invitation. Lord Emmott, the under-secretary for the colonies, will be a member of the party, and Howard d'Elville, honorary secretary of the United Kingdom branch of the Empire Parliamentary Association, to whom a special invitation was sent, will also join the party.

The delegation will arrive at Montreal on July 23, and 12 days have been allowed for the journey across Canada. The party will leave Vancouver on Aug. 6 on the Union Steamship Company's R. M. S. Makura and will travel by way of Honolulu and Fiji to Auckland, New Zealand.

Three days only will be spent in New Zealand and then the delegation will go on to Australia, where a month will be spent visiting the principal cities and examining parliamentary institutions.

The homeward route has not been finally fixed, but the party will leave Australia about Oct. 1 and will probably arrive in England about the end of November.

MARCONI CASE CUTS GOVERNMENT MAJORITY

Speakers in the British House of Commons during debate on share-dealings of chancellor of the exchequer and attorney-general

(Special to the Monitor)

WESTMINSTER—As already reported by cable, the much-discussed debate in the House on the dealings of the chancellor of the exchequer and the attorney-general in shares of the American Marconi Company resulted, as was expected, in a victory for the government. The fact, however, that the normal government majority in the House is 100, that the amendment exonerating the ministers involved was so altered as to include a definite statement of regret at their conduct, and that it was finally passed by a majority of only 76, has deprived the government victory of that decisiveness, as far as their own followers were concerned, which was so evidently looked for.

During practically the whole of the two days' debate the House was filled almost to its utmost capacity, and, whilst the more important speeches were being made, many legislators were unable to obtain seats on the floor of the House, and sought accommodation in the side gallery facing the treasury bench, or stood at the bar.

From a practical point of view, the most important features of the debate were the admissions made by Sir Rufus Isaacs and Mr. Lloyd-George. The former frankly declared that the course he had taken on Oct. 11 was a mistaken course, whilst Mr. Lloyd-George also admitted that it would have been infinitely better that the whole of the facts should have been placed before the House at that time.

The debate on the whole was carried through on an unusually high level. The attorney-general's defense was candid and forcible, and was delivered with all that quite exceptional forensic and oratorical skill which has come to be expected of him. As to the chancellor of the exchequer, what his speech lacked in judicial coolness it made up for in vehemence, frankness, and whatever may be the final opinion on a singularly sordid business, it must be admitted that when Mr. Lloyd-George inveighed against the injustice of attempting to consider a charge of indiscretion "in an atmosphere created by a charge of corruption," he at once commanded the agreement of just judgment.

The prime minister's speech was masterly, and Mr. Balfour's really great effort, in which he appealed to the government to see whether they could not find some course "more consistent with the honor of this assembly, and more likely to maintain the purity of the public service" than that which they proposed to take, carried the debate far above the ordinary level.

After Bonar Law had spoken, Sir Edward Grey wound up the debate for the government. His chief point was that if, as all agreed, the conduct of the ministers had been free from the taint of corruption, the House ought not to pass a motion which could be regarded as a vote of censure.

At 11 o'clock the division was called on Sir Ryland Adkin's amendment to the opposition motion. It ran as follows:

"That this House, after hearing the statements of the attorney-general and the chancellor of the exchequer in reference to their purchase of shares in the Marconi Company of America, accepts their expression of regret that such purchase was made, and that they were not mentioned in the debate of Oct. 11, acquits them of acting otherwise than in good faith, and rebukes the charges of corruption brought against ministers which have proved to be wholly false."

As already stated, the amendment was carried by 78. The voting showed 346 for the amendment and 268 against. The amendment was then put as a substantive motion and agreed to without further division.

PRIME MINISTER ANNOUNCES BILLS FOR NEW ZEALAND

(Special to the Monitor)
WELLINGTON, N. Z.—At a speech delivered at Milton recently, the prime minister, the Hon. W. F. Massey, made it understood that among the measures to be submitted to Parliament in the coming session, would be bills providing that the legislative council should be directly elected by the people; for the removal of anomalies in the tariff so as to reduce the cost of living, and for the establishment of reciprocity with Australia, and for the promotion of the settlement of industrial disputes.

On the question of imperial defense, the Hon. J. Allen stated that whilst New Zealand would continue to pay the motherland a naval subsidy, the country must be prepared to take further steps. New Zealand was in a different position to Australia whose program represented the margin of safety.

The time had come when the country should prepare to take on the responsibility of a young nation approaching maturity.

Changes were made, and that they were not mentioned in the debate of Oct. 11, acquits them of acting otherwise than in good faith, and rebukes the charges of corruption brought against ministers which have proved to be wholly false."

As already stated, the amendment was carried by 78. The voting showed 346 for the amendment and 268 against. The amendment was then put as a substantive motion and agreed to without further division.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA ATTRACTIONS FOR RETIRED SOLDIERS

(Special to the Monitor)
ADELAIDE, S. Aus.—"The state immigration department," stated the commissioner of crown lands and immigration, the Hon. F. W. Young, M. P., in a recent speech, "have received favorable reports with regard to the former soldiers who have come to South Australia during the past few months through the medium of the state immigration agent in India."

"As yet a comparatively small number have arrived, the government having considered it advisable to proceed slowly until such time as they had ascertained that the men would be adaptable for farm work. As was generally anticipated experience has shown that they have soon accustomed themselves to the altered conditions of life and are satisfied with their employment."

"This is particularly exemplified by the information contained in the letters received by the department, the universal opinion expressed being entirely of a satisfactory nature."

With its splendid climate and opportunities South Australia offers many attractions to the former soldier who is looking for outdoor occupation and can readily adapt himself to the requirements of farm life.

CARE OF CHILDREN IS POINT BEFORE BUDAPESTH CONGRESS

(Special to the Monitor)
BUDAPESTH—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt published a manifesto of the objects and aims of the congress, in the Pester Lloyd, which did much to enlighten the people of Hungary as to what would be discussed during the meetings.

She spoke of the progress made during the last eight years. In 1902, she said, an organization was called into being in Washington, to discuss the possibility of an international suffrage movement; in 1904 a congress was held in Berlin; today there were organized bodies in the entire world.

The most remarkable point about the movement was that it was opposed and supported on exactly the same grounds throughout the world. Men of what may be called the military turn of mind oppose women's suffrage everywhere, while the woman reared in luxury and carefully sheltered from everything disagreeable, is against it, for she is satisfied with the privileges she herself enjoys, and any change is only repugnant to her. Countess Iska Teleki, the president of the committee in Budapest, says that the arguments for the suffrage may be summed up shortly as follows: "It is injurious for society that a sensible, capable being should spend the best years of life in fruitless waiting for the coming of a breadwinner, besides this being 'shameful' for the being itself. It is degrading that such a being should have no vote just because it happens to be born a woman, although the laws concern it just in the same proportion as a man."

The countess said that the liberation of woman was just as sure as the abolition of slavery, and of serfdom, of the attainment of religious freedom and emancipation of the Jews—all sufficiently recent in Hungary to be remembered by the elder inhabitants.

Direction of Women's Work

The most noticeable point about the whole congress was that the vote was evidently being asked, not so much with a view to bettering the present position of women, as for the benefit of the next generation. Speakers constantly referred to the importance of caring for the young, as they represented the future, and there is no doubt that the trend of movement is primarily in this direction. The need of legislation is not so pressing for a number of women, who have passed their prime, and who are, for good or evil. The question which occupies this generation is the welfare of the next. This point was emphasized again and again throughout the proceedings.

Papers on Care of Children

At a branch meeting held in Budapest in connection with the congress papers on criminology and the care of children in great cities, were read.

Frau Anna Lindemann, the leading authority of the question, in Germany, said that the teacher could combat the ever-growing evil in the great cities, where children were forced to play on the streets, in conditions which were highly demoralizing.

Frau Eline Hansen, of Copenhagen, gave some account of the result attained in Denmark by the work of the cooking and household schools for girls where they were trained in the work of servants, and thus able to take better posts and to earn higher wages, than in former years, when everything had to be learnt after quitting the school.

Oswald B. Powell of Peterfield gave a description of the work done in the Badley reform schools, and of the system of coeducation there, which had produced the very best results. There is no doubt that this excursion into practical pedagogy, was one of the most useful features of the entire proceedings.

Royalty at Opera House

A special gala performance was arranged for the delegates and members of the congress, at the Budapest opera house, and the congress members noticed with great satisfaction that Archduchess Augusta, the wife of Archduke Josef, was present at the performance. The archduchess, who before her marriage was a Bavarian princess, takes the greatest interest in everything new. She was one of the first members of a royal family to go up in an aeroplane, and is fond of every kind of sport and outdoor life.

Sensible Clothing

The congress members were, on the whole, very appropriately dressed. The various reporters noticed this almost with astonishment, in their accounts of the meetings. They were particularly struck with the appearance of the Duchess of Marlborough, nee Consuelo Vanderbilt. It is a matter for congratulation that American and British women have drawn forth a tribute of distinct admiration for their taste in dress from the Viennese and Hungarians whose judgment in deciding the question of what ought to be worn, is in no wise inferior to that of the French, although their manipulation of the material stands far below that of Paris.

Child Welfare

Some remarkable addresses were given on the question of child welfare. Frau Maria Stritt spoke of the necessity of placing a weapon in the hand of the mother which would enable her to fight for the welfare and good of the infant. She said that the terrible misuse of the working powers of women and children in the sweat industries could only be put an end to by women themselves. Mme. Verone, the Paris advocate, referred to the evil effects of a double moral standard, and claimed justice for all women who were mothers alike, regardless of their status before the law. Her speech was greeted with the utmost enthusiasm, although both in Austria and Hungary there is but small need for reform in this matter, as far as the mothers are concerned.

The Only Way Is the Vote

The Rev. Anna Shaw reminded her hearers several times in the course of the meetings that the only way in which they could accomplish all the aims which they had mentioned was by the vote. Only political power, she said, could bring about what they desired. She said that at present men had no time to wait for women, whose pace was different from theirs. She might compare the present state of affairs to two travelers, one sat in a flying machine, the other in an ox cart. Mrs. Shaw said that in future they must both sit in the aeroplane, side by side.

U. S. Board Reports on New Haven

not only prudently but, above all, within the letter and the spirit of the law.

Stock Distribution Shown

"A statement has been furnished us showing the stock distribution of both the New Haven and the Boston & Maine. On Jan. 1, 1913, there were 22,716 stockholders in the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., and of these 3600 were trustees and guardians. Over 9000 held 10 shares or less, and almost another 9000 had holdings between 11 and 50 shares. The distribution of Boston & Maine stock is about the same.

"We have been furnished with another statement showing that of the railroads entering the state of Massachusetts, most of which are involved in this investigation, $184,722,400 of the stocks are owned in that state. These facts are earnestly pressed upon us in the view that the investing as well as the shipping public is vitally interested in this problem.

"This commission is keenly alive to this phase of the subject. We sympathize with the small stockholders of these companies; we shall permit and take any proper action which will relieve them, but it must be clearly understood that no distinction can be made between the different stockholders of these corporations. It is the company which must be dealt with, and not the individual stockholder."

Throughout the voluminous report, however, runs denunciation of financial methods employed by the present management of the roads. In connection with the New Haven's system of book-keeping and its recording of the disposition of about 12,000 shares of treasury stock, the commission said:

"There is no evidence to show any impropriety in this transaction, but the very character of it, the way it was conducted, and the manner in which it is permanently recorded are such that nothing can ever be known about it by examination of the books and papers of the New Haven company."

"It is difficult to understand the necessity for these circuitous and subterranean proceedings. If the thing is done properly and legally why not proceed to do it in the direct way? This is but one of many similar examples that might be given of the New Haven system of management."

The commission had attempted, in this case, to learn of the disposition of a sum of approximately $125,000. Speaking of the commission, it reported:

"We were not willing to have President Mellen testify under oath because it would have accorded him immunity, so he gave us a statement, but not under oath. His statement was that the amount had been used in campaign expenses during the summer and fall of 1904 and that he had had the ratification of the directors in this act."

"For many years," continued the report, "the railroad monopoly of New England has been more complete than in any other section of this country. The average rates upon the New Haven for 1911 were higher by ten mile average than is shown by any other large railroad system in the United States."

The capitalization of the New Haven road was gone into great detail by the commission.

"The total capitalization on June 30, 1913," the report said, "was approximately $93,000,000 of which $79,000,000 was stock and $14,000,000 bonds. On June 30, 1912, the capitalization was $417,000,000 an increase of $324,000,000 while the operated mileage was increased only 50 miles. In the nine years the road expended $98,000,000 upon its railroads for betterments and equipment, making a total of $136,000,000 devoted to its railroad property. This left $204,000,000 devoted to operations outside its railroad sphere."

Telling how the New Haven used this money in purchasing Rhode Island trolleys that competed with its steam lines, the report went on to say of this Rhode Island purchase:

"The United Gas Improvement Company, which owned the trolleys, turned in the water and the New Haven gave $13,500,000 for nothing."

The sale of the Boston & Maine stock by order of the courts as viewed by the commission, corroborates the stories of the purchase by J. L. Billard of Connecticut, who "made nearly $3,000,000 out of the deal without the investment of a cent of capital."

Under a caption, "The Remedy," the commission declares that the New Haven should be divorced from its trolleys; that its trolley holdings throughout Massachusetts, Connecticut and other New England states should be taken from the road as well as its enormous water navigation lines between Boston and points north and south on the Atlantic seaboard.

The commission lays down rules which, if eventually adopted, will revolutionize railway operations throughout the country, inasmuch as it will narrow absolutely operations, the commission saying: "In the opinion of the commission the following propositions lie at the foundation of all adequate regulation of interstate railways:

"A—Every interstate railroad should be prohibited from expending money or incurring liability or acquiring property not in the operation of its railroad or in the legitimate improvement, extension or development of that railroad.

"B—No interstate railroad should be permitted to lease or purchase any other railroad, nor to acquire the stocks of any other railroad, nor to guarantee the same, directly or indirectly, with the approval of the federal government.

"C—No stocks or bonds should be issued by an interstate railroad except for the purchases sanctioned by the two pre-

POINTS BROUGHT OUT IN REPORT ON NEW HAVEN SYSTEM BY THE INTERSTATE BOARD

In its report upon the New Haven railroad and its conduct of the New England lines, the interstate commerce commission says:

The passenger service of the New Haven is better than any other system operating in the state of New York, while the Boston & Maine is equal to that upon any New York system.

Freight service is inferior to what it should be, although fairly comparing with that in other sections where conditions are substantially the same.

The freight service upon the Boston & Maine during the period covered by the investigation was extremely poor and justified in a great measure the criticisms.

The local freight rates in New England are slightly higher than the average in official classification territory, but compare favorably with them. The long distance rates to and from New England are lower than in most sections.

The outside financial operations of the New Haven for the last nine years have been wasteful in the extreme. The financial condition calls for careful consideration and prudent action but gives no occasion for hysteria.

The mutual understanding with the Boston & Albany is held to be in violation of the statute.

That the New Haven should divest itself of all of its trolley subsidiaries.

Of the Boston and Maine merger, continued, it will result "in an exclusive monopoly in New England."

"The outside properties of the New Haven have been acquired at extravagant prices."

As "financial misfortunes and derelictions" the board classes the Rhode Island Company, the Westchester deal, the Billard transactions, the Connecticut railway purchases and the acquisition of the Massachusetts trolleys.

ceding paragraphs, and none should be issued without the approval of the federal government."

The commission says "outside financial operations of the New Haven Company have been for the last nine years wasteful in the extreme." It says the system should get rid of its trolley roads.

Summary of Report

Summarized, the conclusions of the commission are:

That while the passenger service is good, there is room for improvement. That while the freight service of the New Haven road is inferior, it compares fairly well with that of other sections similarly situated. That the freight service on the Boston & Maine is extremely poor and justifies criticism made, although an earnest effort is being made to remedy this.

That local freight rates in New England, while slightly higher than in official classification, compare favorably with other sections and the through rates are lower than elsewhere. That passenger fares have been more favorable to the local traveling public than in any other portion of the United States.

That outside financial operations of the New Haven Company have been for the last nine years wasteful in the extreme and the methods by which those operations have been conducted are necessarily involved and complex. While expenditure on its road and equipment has been with a free hand, there is nothing to show that it has not been wisely made, and much to indicate that the result has fully justified the outlay. The financial condition of the company calls for careful consideration and prudent action, but gives no occasion for alarm.

It is declared that the system should get rid of its trolley roads. In this connection the owning of competitive lines is widely discussed and the commission strikes at the lobby in the following paragraph:

"It was stated that the state of Connecticut has expressly permitted the acquisition of these trolley roads by the New Haven system. It is worthy of remark that the general counsel of the New Haven road testified that, while the Legislature of Connecticut did vote finally unanimously in favor of the New Haven ownership of trolley lines, sentiment was at the outset the other way and it was only after $100,000 had been expended in 'molding' the opinion of the Legislature that the final result was attained."

Freight Terminals Blamed

The report finds that most of the freight delay is at terminals which are inadequate for the volume of business received. It reports that during nine years $136,000,000 was expended on the railroad property proper and $204,000,000 in "operations outside its railroad sphere."

Of this latter sum most of it went on the steamship companies and the trolley lines. Discussing the Rhode Island trolley system acquired, the commission after reviewing the intricate financial dealings and stock transactions, says:

"Representatives of the New Haven earnestly insisted they had not watered the stock of the Rhode Island Company and this, strictly speaking, is true. The improvement company, which took over the Providence, Pawtucket and adjacent lines turned in the water and the New Haven Company gave $13,500,000 for nothing."

The commission declares further that the New York, Westchester & Boston, the 20-mile road running from White Plains to the Harlem river, has cost the New Haven $12,000,000 in excess of the showing on its books.

All of the financial transactions of the New Haven are characterized as "extremely involved," and the commission reviews at great length all of the testimony along this line including the records of every deal engineered by President Mellen. The commission insists, however, that there is absolutely no evidence to indicate that the solvency of the New Haven has been in any way impaired.

BOSTON SHARES IN ARGENTINA'S 'FOURTH OF JULY'

Naon later, when he had returned to his rooms in the Copley-Plaza. "It is the great day of the year with us. On July 9, 1816, in the town of Tucuman, our declaration of independence was signed. Today, aboard the Sarmiento, the singing of national hymns by the men was very impressive.

"I have no definite plans for the rest of the day," continued Dr. Naon. "Probably, I shall go back to Washington to-night, but I am not sure."

Mayor Fitzgerald entertained the midshipmen from the Presidente Sarmiento at lunch at the Copley Plaza this noon and took them on an automobile tour of the Boston park system. In the party was Dr. Naon. Tonight the mayor will conduct the visitors to Nantasket.

That part of the Presidente Sarmiento's crew which did not go to Quincy Tuesday will visit the Fore River plant today.

Government ships in the harbor are decorated with bunting today in honor of the national holiday of the visitors.

The Rivadavia, which is building at Quincy is now nearly completed, according to the Argentine naval officers today. The ship is now scheduled to sail for Rockland, Me., Aug. 3 where its trial trip will be held over the government standardization course off Monrovia.

The Rivadavia, which is building at Quincy is now nearly completed, according to the Argentine naval officers today. The ship is now scheduled to sail for Rockland, Me., Aug. 3 where its trial trip will be held over the government standardization course off Monrovia.

The luncheon at the Copley-Plaza today was informal, and, although there was speaking, it was extemporaneous.

The Presidente Sarmiento is making a cruise to foreign waters, and next Saturday she will sail for Lisbon. The call at Halifax which had been scheduled has been omitted. Stops will be made at Toulon, Spezia, Tripoli, Gibraltar and St. Vincent, thence to the home port.

Ship-rigged the training ship is provided with machinery which gives her a speed of 15 knots an hour. Her armament includes four five-inch guns and four of smaller calibre. On arriving off Commonwealth piers Monday afternoon, the vessel was saluted by guns from the navy yard. The vessel carries 19 cadets, 14 officers and about 300 men.

What Independence Meant

Argentina's anniversary of independence has a significance for the world at large. What was proclaimed in the city of Tucuman was not merely the emancipation from Spanish rule, but more from geographical isolation. For centuries compelled to face toward the Pacific ocean and to communicate with the outside world through Lima, in utter disregard of her magnificent situation on the River Plate and the Atlantic ocean, the River Plate region by winning political independence achieved a geographical victory which proved the foundation of Argentina's unparalleled prosperity and the hegemony of the Spanish-American world in which the original territory for many generations had played but an insignificant role.

Argentina's independence cannot be recalled without mention of the great fact that thanks to the great San Martin it meant that of half the Spanish world on the southern continent, nor is it unfitting here to recall the other great fact in the history of South America that liberty came to her by the cooperation of great men of Saxon love of freedom.

PITTSBURGH BANK FACES AN INQUIRY
WASHINGTON—Asserting that the First-Second National Bank of Pittsburgh, which was closed by the comptroller of the currency on Monday, had been "seriously mismanaged," Secretary McAdoo of the treasury department on Tuesday indicated his purpose to ask Attorney-General McReynolds to investigate alleged irregularities in the conduct of the institution. Secretary McAdoo is now collecting data for the department of justice.

JOHN SKELTON WILLIAMS, assistant secretary of the treasury, returned on Tuesday from Pittsburgh, where he superintended the closing of the bank and reported the necessity for an inquiry.

Thomas P. Kane, acting comptroller of the currency, advised Secretary McAdoo on Tuesday that the receivership was progressing satisfactorily and the general banking conditions in Pittsburgh were sound.

The latest reports indicate the losses of the First-Second may reach $5,500,000, but that the depositors, whose claims total about $38,000,000, probably would be paid in full.

PUBLIC BEQUESTS MADE IN WILL OF CHARLES D. SIAS

Dartmouth, University of Vermont and Other Institutions Named as Beneficiaries

SALEM, Mass.—In the Essex county probate office today the will of Charles D. Sias of Boston and Wenham was filed for probate. By its terms $170,000 is eventually to be given in public bequests. A trust fund of $100,000 is set aside so that the income will be paid to his wife. After a long list of private bequests to the employees of Chase & Sanborn, of which firm he was a member, the balance of the estate is to be turned into a second trust, the income to go to his wife.

The total fund of these two trusts is afterward to be used for the payment of $15,000 each for Dartmouth College, University of Vermont and Montpelier Academy; $10,000 each to the Thomas Morgan Rotch, Jr., hospital and the New England Deaconess Association of Boston; and $5000 each to about 20 local institutions. The will is dated May 22, 1913.

The trustees include Alice Sias, his wife; Thomas P. Rich, and William M. Prest.

FREE COOK STOVES PROVISION FOUND IN OLD SALEM WILL

SALEM, Mass.—Every deserving family in Salem will receive free a cook stove and cooking utensils if the city accepts provisions in the will of Thomas W. Sweetser, who passed away in Boston 59 years ago, but whose conditional gift has until now remained unclaimed.

His will provided that $10,000 be paid to his native city, that this be put on interest at 6 per cent forever and $600 spent annually in buying stoves and utensils for the poor, if his estate amounted to $30,000 or more. The estate now inventories much in excess of this sum.

If the fund is not accepted by the city on the conditions established, the will says, the money is to be divided equally among the heirs at law.

The unusual bequest became known Tuesday through an appeal by heirs to the probate court that authority be given trustees of the estate to sell real estate in Maple place, off Harrison avenue, Boston.

NAVY MAN BEGINS CONTEST AGAINST HIS RETIREMENT

WASHINGTON—Capt. Templin M. Potts, U. S. N., retired, former commander of the battleship Louisiana arrived here Tuesday and went to the navy department to obtain copies of his official record as a first step in the contest he is expected to make to overturn the action of the naval plucking board in directing his retirement from active service.

It is believed in naval circles that Capt. Potts has a good case and much sympathy is expressed for him even by officers who have no particular interest in his welfare.

Captain Potts remained at the department for a few minutes only and received the assurance that a statement of his service record would be made up and sent to him. He said he had not decided whether he would go into the courts for redress or not.

Captain Potts was entitled to promotion on March 26, when the retirement of Rear Admiral Merts created a vacancy. He had passed his physical and professional examination, but his promotion was held up by Secretary Daniels and an order promulgated to the effect that no officer could be promoted unless he had spent one-half the time of his grade at sea.

BEACH BOATS ON FULL SCHEDULE
Steamboats on the Nantasket beach line are operating full schedule today following the settlement of the strike called at noon Tuesday by the Marine Firemen's Union.

Two Portuguese firemen employed on the steamer Old Colony were discharged Tuesday morning with the result that a strike of all the firemen was ordered. Two hours later a settlement was reached and the men returned, the two discharged men having been reinstated.

FIRE DAMAGES TRADE BUILDING

Damage estimated at $10,000 was caused by a two-alarm fire on the ninth floor of the Trade building at Washington, North and Thatcher streets, last evening. The building is owned by the Merchants Real Estate Company.

AVERY STREET HEARING ON

On the question of accepting the legislative act authorizing the widening of Avery street from Washington street to Tremont street, the city council is giving a public hearing this afternoon.

LIGHT CONTRACT IS OPPOSED AT PUBLIC HEARING

Opposition, led by Henry F. Higgins, representing the committee on municipal and metropolitan affairs of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, to the 10-year contract with the Boston Consolidated Gas Company for lighting the streets of the city was brought forth at the public hearing of the city council Tuesday evening.

The principal objections were that the contract does not provide for improved service or new equipment, as it was argued, would be obtained should the city buy and install new lamps, and that at the end of 10 years the city's lighting would be in the same condition as now, only still farther behind the times.

Edgar N. Wrightington, vice-president of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, said the company had submitted to Louis K. Rourke, commissioner of public works, the bid for $21.50 per lamp per year for 10 years, and proposed to submit to the Rising Sun Street Lighting Company, which has had the street lighting in charge for 20 years, the contract for operating the lighting plant.

Commissioner Rourke expressed himself as favorable to the proposed contract, saying that he considered it the best proposition he had been able to secure after a two years' study of the problem.

The council took the matter under advisement.

TROLLEY TRACKS TO BE RELOCATED

MANUFACTURERS SEEK SUMMONS IN LOBBY INQUIRY

Association Asks Chairman Overman to Issue Subpoenas for Former Speaker Cannon and Many Other Past Officials

MR. WHITMAN TALKS

WASHINGTON—Counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers today asked Chairman Overman of the Senate lobby investigation committee to subpoena 40 former well known congressional leaders including former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon, and former Senator Nelson A. Aldrich. These men are to be called, it was stated, to refute the testimony which it is expected Col. M. M. Mulhall of Baltimore, former lobbyist for the association, will give when he takes the stand tomorrow.

Senator Overman declined to issue the subpoenas at this time. "If it should develop from Mulhall's story," said Mr. Overman, "that these men are needed to testify here, why we will call them. But until we hear Mulhall's story under oath, there is no need of placing these men under subpoena. As a matter of fact none of them will run away."

Others who were proposed by the National Association of Manufacturers, in addition to those previously mentioned, were Senators Crane, Lodge, and Penrose, Representatives McDermott, Sherman, and in fact, every public man whose name has been in any way connected with the Mulhall statements.

The latter part of the morning session was taken up with inconsequential preliminary questioning of William Whitman by Senator Reed. The witness was asked many questions about the mills he was interested in, description of processes, output, etc., which he answered in detail.

The questions relative to the mills, and later to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers became so detailed that Mr. Whitman said: "It is pretty difficult for a man of affairs to recollect all the details such as you are asking. But I would like to say that I am very anxious and very desirous of giving the committee all the information it is possible to give."

To most of the questions as to manner of raising funds for the association, dates when he held office, by-laws and so forth, the witness had to answer: "I do not know" or "I cannot recollect." At one point Winthrop L. Marvin, who sat near the witness arose and asked permission, as secretary of the association, to give the information the committee was seeking from Mr. Whitman.

"Mr. Whitman has not been in close touch with these matters for years," he said. "But I think when you reach me I will be able to give you all these details."

Mr. Whitman said he had been the first treasurer of the association over 25 years ago, and had been president from 1884 to 1893 and from 1904 to 1911. He thought the dues were about $25 a year for his membership, but that memberships were usually assessed according to the number of sets of cards in the mills. The senators frequently pressed the witness by saying they thought he was perhaps the best posted woolen man in the country.

Because the work of sorting out and arranging in chronological order the 20,000 letters and other documents turned over to the committee by Martin M. Mulhall is taking more time than had been anticipated, the calling of the former lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers was further deferred when the inquiry was resumed today. Senator Reed, who has taken charge of the presentation of this evidence, expects it will be in shape for the committee not later than tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, the committee continued its efforts to complete the record of the operations of the wool and sugar lobbies. Most of this evidence is purely cumulative and confirmatory of previous witnesses.

The first witness today was A. D. Baldwin of Cleveland, O., a member of the firm of Alexander & Baldwin, one of the biggest sugar producers of Hawaii. Mr. Baldwin is a lawyer, and his brothers, he said, are the practical sugar men of the family. He said that he has been in Washington since early in April calling on senators and representatives and endeavoring to interest them in maintaining the duty on sugar.

Mr. Baldwin said that his compensation was $30 a day while in Washington and his legitimate expenses.

"How did you expect to earn that amount?" demanded Chairman Overman. "Oh, I don't know that I earned it, but the sugar men wanted me here and were willing to pay me," the witness replied.

Mr. Baldwin admitted that there were more than half a dozen other men working for the sugar men who got at least as much as he did. Senator Overman intimated that these men must have been doing more than merely "calling" on senators in the interest of their cause but the witness insisted this was all he had done.

"And you got $30 a day and expenses for calling on less than 20 senators and

Legation in London Also Contradicts Ishtip Stories and Declares That the Timok Division, so Far From Having Been Annihilated, Has Now Taken Krivolak

LONDON — The Monitor has been placed by the Serbian legation in possession of information which gives probably as exactly as it is possible to obtain it the military position at the present moment. The center of Serbian concentration in Macedonia is the town of Uskub, which is dominated by the Ovtchepolye plateau.

It was because of this that the Bulgarians made their late attack in force on this position. Regarding Ishtip the legation denies, in spite of the statements of Lieutenant Wagner, that this town has ever changed hands. The correspondents have described its capture and recapture six times during the week, and this story has had the support of the Bulgarian government. The Serbian legation emphatically and categorically denies that Ishtip has ever been attacked. It is situated within the Bulgarian zone, which is not disputed, and no effort whatever has been made to penetrate to it.

The object of the story is explained as an attempt on the part of Bulgaria to prove that she has been attacked by Serbia. Such an attack is unnecessary. Serbia is in possession of the whole of the disputed territory and has consequently no reason for attacking Bulgaria. On the other hand Bulgaria has every reason, if she is to make good her claim, for attacking Serbia, and driving her out of the disputed territory. Again respecting Krivolak this place is now in the hands of the Serbians. It is on the frontier of the disputed zone and was captured by the Bulgarians in their first advance. It was here that the Serbian Timok division was reported by writing a very few letters, did you?" demanded Senator Overman.

"Yes, sir; I did."

"Did you aid the publicity campaign?"

"Very little, and I could add nothing more to what Mr. Ballou has already told you."

Mr. Baldwin was examined at great length by most of the senators, but his story in effect duplicated those by Ballou, Cook and other sugar men who have already been on the stand.

It is learned today from a senator on the foreign relations committee that Frederick C. Penfield, who has been nominated as ambassador to Austria will be called before the committee to be questioned about his contributions to the Democratic campaign fund. Republican senators want to learn what foundation there is to the report brought to them that Mr. Penfield contributed about $90,000 to the Wilson campaign on the understanding that he was to receive an ambassadorship.

It was said he contributed $30,000 in the hope of getting a post, then subsequently gave two more $30,000 lots in return for a promise that he should be ambassador to Italy, which post he is said to have wanted. Austria will satisfy him, it is understood. This investigation will hold up Mr. Penfield's confirmation for a time, it is assured by the senator who gives the information, and the result may affect even the appointment of National Committee Chairman McCombs as ambassador to France.

MINE INQUIRY TO BE RESUMED

WASHINGTON—The Senate investigation of conditions in the West Virginia coal mine regions will be resumed next week probably on Tuesday, Senator Swanson, chairman of the investigation committee, said on Tuesday.

Hearings will be resumed with witnesses for the coal operators in the Paint Creek and Cabin Creek fields. Senator Kenyon will be authorized to go to Charleston and complete the testimony of witnesses there.

the Bulgarians to have been annihilated. The Serbians deny emphatically that this annihilation ever took place and assert equally emphatically that it is the supposedly annihilated Timok division which has now captured and is holding Krivolak.

Respecting the Bulgarian statements that the Serbian frontier has been penetrated by the St. Nicholas pass and by an advance upon Vrania, it was pointed out that on a front of 350 miles it was possible without any trouble at all to penetrate the frontier. Such penetrations were, however, purely for dramatic effect and for publication in the papers and had no real strategic value.

The idea that Vrania had fallen was entirely scouted. In the present position of the forces it was to Serbia the most vital strategic point existing and with the forces concentrated round it it was impossible that Bulgaria could have taken it without a battle, the effects of which would have been telegraphed over the world.

Vrania itself is not a fortified position and does not compare in this way with Nish. Nevertheless the concentration of troops in the zone between it and Nish made it impossible that it could have been captured by the Bulgarians with so little difficulty.

Finally the legation entirely questioned the Bulgarian statements respecting the forces employed.

It was pointed out that the batteries captured as well as the prisoners taken constituted an obvious contradiction of the Bulgarian figures.

The prisoners represented so many battalions as to make it certain that at least 100,000 Bulgarians had been engaged in the recent fight and if this were not the case the losses admitted by the Bulgarians themselves were the strongest proof that far more than merely two divisions had been employed.

BUILDING WILL ASSEMBLE AND SHOW RECORDS

Storage Planned for Documents That Will Preserve to Future Scenes, Events and Characters That Tell World Progress

SELECTION PROBLEM

NEW YORK—Plans have been made for the proposed new building for the Modern Records Association, to hold the valuable data gathered by its members and to serve as a place for conducting study and research work. The new structure will provide an amphitheater capable of seating 2000 persons and will have storage rooms and exhibition galleries.

Arthur Dillon, one of the incorporators of the association, discussing the proposed building, said: "The scope of the association is so great that its principal difficulty will be in limiting its collections, for its object is to take care of everything that will enable future generations to obtain a clear and complete picture of the developments of civilization, from now on; and it will also endeavor to preserve, in an equally systematic manner, those relics of the past which have not yet perished, or which future research may bring to light."

"The building will provide first, for the preservation of records; second, for the examination and study of records, including duplicates of those in permanent storage, somewhat analogous to a consulting library, with actual things taking the place of books; thirdly, for the display and making of records, and for this it will have large galleries, amphitheaters, lecture rooms, laboratories and workshops."

"The center is occupied by a vestibule decorated with statues. Behind it is the principal amphitheater. From either side of the vestibule, extending across the main front, is a series of galleries for exhibition of records of popular interest, with lecture rooms. The stack and storage rooms occupy the court behind the amphitheater. They extend in parallel lines across it, and connect the lateral wings. These are built over vaults, designed for special storage, that extend under the entire building."

The officers of the association include: Honorary president, William H. Taft; president, Herbert L. Bridgman; secretary, William George Jordan; treasurer, E. M. Cravath.

BANKS TO PAY TAXES ON LAND

MINNEAPOLIS—Asst. Atty.-Gen. W. J. Stevenson recently decided that 57 Minnesota banks which own real estate outside of Minnesota, worth $200,000, will have to pay Minnesota taxes instead of deducting it from their bank stocks.

The state tax commission has the list of this property and will take steps to place it on the tax rolls. The law regarding assessment of banks allows the value of their real estate holdings to be deducted from the value of the stock in fixing the personal property assessments, as the land is assessed separately.

"L" ARBITERS TO MEET SOON TO FIX SCALE

Return of Mr. Storow, Third Man on Board to Adjust Wage and Work Problem, Necessary to Final Action

PROBLEMS IN HAND

Both the time and place for the conference to settle the five remaining requests out of 48 made by the Boston Street Carmen's Union to the Elevated company will be designated tonight if James J. Storow, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, returns to the city today from Vermont. Such was the announcement made today by James H. Vahey, attorney for the union, who learned of Mr. Storow's expected arrival through James A. McKibben, secretary of the chamber.

Mr. Storow was selected last night as the third man to act with Mr. Vahey and James L. Richards, the representative appointed by the company, as arbitrators in the points at issue between the Elevated and its 7000 employees.

The board of arbitrators must announce its findings within 30 days, and both the company and the union have pledged themselves to abide by the decisions that are made. The entire dispute which led to taking a strike vote was centered in the selection of a third arbitrator. Having chosen its arbitrator the Elevated company objected to his discussing the selection of the third man with any one who did not have authority to bind the union to the selection of the person agreed upon, which was in accordance with the agreement.

On the other hand the union was unwilling to submit the differences to arbitration if there was any possibility of the third arbitrator being selected by any one excepting the other two arbitrators.

Members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce appointed a committee last Thursday to overcome the deadlock, and after numerous conferences Mr. Storow was selected to preside over the arbitration board.

The matters to be arbitrated are: "1.—To determine what scale of wages shall be paid by the company to the members of the association. This shall include all matters which necessitate any change in the amount of wages now paid by the company, whether in the aggregate or individually. Also the question of changing the existing graduated scale of wages of blue uniform men and reduction in the number of classifications in shops and the question of any change in the existing guaranteed or minimum wage. (Nothing concerning hours of labor is to be submitted to arbitration except it is herein specifically described.)"

"2.—Hours of labor of employees of road and track departments.

"3.—Establishment of uniformity of hours in shops.

"4.—Free transportation for employees.

"5.—Abolition of piece work."

The agreement also decided that the decision of the board shall be final and deciding and must be rendered within 30 days after the close of the hearings. It also determined that so far as wages are concerned the board shall not fix a scale of wages for a period of longer than three years nor less than one.

The selection of Mr. Storow as third arbitrator found hearty approval with the several hundred barn and shop captains and committee men from all parts of the system who had gathered at 724 Washington street last night to learn the result of the day's proceedings. The men were addressed by Organizer Fay, Attorney Vahey, President J. J. Higgins and Business Agent Nesdale.

General Organizer Fay and Attorney Vahey last night made the following statement:

"In view of the fact that we have been given a large share of the responsibility for dealing with this situation, we want to express our gratitude that it has been so favorably ended."

"We also desire to say that we deeply appreciate the work of the committee of the Chamber of Commerce in these negotiations."

"Neither of us has any acquaintance with Mr. Storow, but his character and standing in this commonwealth assure us that he is one of the best qualified men that could be found to deal with this problem."

"His award, whatever it may be, will be respected by our membership, because we know it will be honestly made."

U. S. STEEL TO SPEND $20,000,000

DULUTH, Minn.—James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, who returned on Tuesday from an inspection of the corporation's mine leases on the Minnesota ranges, said the corporation would expend $20,000,000 on the steel mill at Gary outside Duluth.

"In addition to a model town at Gary," he said, "we will build a $2,000,000 cement plant with a capacity of 400,000 barrels a day as a side line."

ENGLISH BAR ADMITS CANADIAN

TORONTO—Burriss Gahan, a former student of the University of Toronto, has just distinguished himself by taking first honors in the final examination for the English bar. The standard of scholarship demanded may be gauged by the fact that in the examinations out of 711 candidates only 420 passed, only 30 got first-class honors, 11 being in the final. Mr. Gahan has secured a certificate of honor by the Council of Legal Education and a prize of £50 by the Benchers of the Inner Temple, by whom he has been called to the bar.

Mr. Gahan is a son of H. B. Gahan of London, Ont. He was graduated from Toronto University in 1898.

STATE WILL PAY FOREST TAXES

LA CROSSE, Wis.—The question of forest conservation by Wisconsin has been put over for two years by the passage of the Peavey bill, which provides that a joint committee from this Legislature shall be empowered to investigate conditions at the Wisconsin forest reserve to ascertain its value. The opposition comes in counties in which the reserve is located, but has been appeased in part by a bill which provides that the state shall pay taxes on its forest reserve lands, and in this way assist the settlers in northern Wisconsin to build schools and roads.

NEW RAILROAD DEPOTS BUILT

TAYLOR, Tex.—The International & Great Northern Railway Company's new concrete and steel freight depot building in this city, erected for about $30,000, was taken over recently by the owners. The Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway Company has just finished a handsome $30,000 new brick and stone passenger station building and it is now open to the public.

CLAIM FILED AGAINST NICARAGUA WASHINGTON—The Atlantic Fruit Company of New York has filed a claim for $1,793,885 against the republic of Nicaragua with the Nicaraguan mixed claims commission now sitting here. It is alleged that the Nicaraguan government cancelled a concession owned by the company.

$165,000 GIVEN TO YALE FRATERNITY

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Frederick Vanderbilt of Yale, '78S, has given to the Delta Psi fraternity, of which he was a member when in college, $165,000 for a society hall and dormitory. Mr. Vanderbilt has given to the Sheffield scientific school two dormitories and has purchased land for the extension of these buildings, which will eventually form a complete dormitory system for the scientific school. His complete gift to the scientific school will be the largest received from any one donor, and will aggregate between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000.

WORCESTER TO HAVE THEATER WORCESTER, Mass.—It is generally understood among theatrical men here that Salem Square Congregational church has been taken over by interests which intend building an up-to-date playhouse. Both the Poli and Shea interests in Worcester seem to be agreed that P. F. Shea, lessee of Worcester theater, has the property.

MR. ROOSEVELT SPEAKS OF CAUSE

KANSAS CITY—Theodore Roosevelt, accompanied by his sons, en route to Arizona, arrived here on Tuesday night and 10 minutes later left for the West. In a brief address Colonel Roosevelt said:

"I have been mulling busy in the last 18 months and I am now going to Arizona for a month's rest. I find myself in a dilemma, as I do not want to talk politics and it is difficult for me to talk at all without discussing politics. However, I will say this much: The principles for which I stand must prevail. They mean justice to every man, woman and child, and I must continue to fight for them."

LIGHT SYSTEM AUTHORIZED NORTHAMPTON, Mass.—At a special meeting of the city government Tuesday evening, the order authorizing the city government to assume the entire cost of the arch system of lighting Main street was given its second reading.

FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

PRETTY MODES OBSERVED
AT PUTEAUX IN THE SEINE

IT WAS a lovely afternoon and the little island of Puteaux in the Seine was bright with sunshine and roses and big umbrellas with tea tables set under them, all making a delightful setting for dainty robes and modes, writes a Paris contributor to the Monitor. There too are beautiful trees with climbing roses trained up the trunks and beds of massed hydrangeas on the ground below. Here the smartest folks in Paris meet for tennis and tea and talk, and indeed one could not wait for a pleasanter place on a hot summer's afternoon. The tennis players are dressed much like tennis players anywhere else, with perhaps a little more attention to detail. A pretty little figure stood out in white linen skirt and a coat of a soft ecru shade showing a touch of very pale rose color at the throat of the lingerie blouse underneath, and to complete the costume a boy scout hat of stitched white satin sharply turned up at one side. One of the players, in white skirt and blouse, wore a big sailor hat with slightly upturned brim, the hat of fine black straw with an edge of bright cherry color and a band of broad black velvet round the crown and tied behind in a bow.

A very chic tailored suit presented a good combination of color, the skirt of blue cloth slightly full at the hips with the prettiest little coat of canary yellow cloth and turn-down collar and full-buttoned waistcoat of soft white linen. A white liberty satin gown was cut in straight lines at the back and sides while the front had several large tucks across stitched only a little way and then left loose to form the drapery and large boules satin buttons from waist to hem. The sash of black crepe de chine was broad and swathed around the figure with a large bow and long ends at the back, and the bodice made with long sleeves, buttoned to the elbow was trimmed with ruffles of ivory-tinted lace. The hat worn with this gown was of white straw with black lined brim, black tulle veiled the white straw and ruby colored roses made a wreath round the crown with, to one side, a smart outstanding bow of the ruby velvet.

A pretty pale moleskin satin or charmeuse gown was trimmed with fashion with soft ivory lace and had a posy of old rose flowers tucked in at the waist; the overskirt was tucked up short in front where the tucks were held in place with large round gun metal buttons and fell away much longer to the back. A girl who was very slight wore a three-decker skirt in accordion plaited blue voile nixon with a wide sash of black taffetas lace. The bodice, left open at the throat, was trimmed with a collar of pale ecru chiffon quite plain with a buttonhole stitch round the edge, deep and rounded in the back and coming down to the waist in front. The sleeves hung straight and wide to the elbow with loose inner sleeve of the ecru chiffon.

A gown of dark blue and putina was very picturesque. The skirt was of dark blue liberty satin and the tunic of shimmering putina gauzy material caught up in front with five large buttons and edged with a deep openwork hem worked in dark blue silk. The bodice was made cross over fashion and the ruffles of lace that trimmed it followed this line to where the sash of putina hitched slightly up to the side at the point where the buttons started on the tunic, under a bouquet of blue hyacinths with one vivid crimson rose. The hat worn with this looked like a big blue tulle flower with a putina center to it; the sunshade was blue and the stockings were putina.

Another pretty gown was of shot silk in blue natter and lilac, and the sash and the hat were of the blue, the latter trimmed with tulle the same shade in a high ruche round the crown and one beautiful Caroline Testout rose to the side. The fichu that trimmed the bodice was of net, ivory tinted, all covered with tiny ruffles of fine lace. The elbow sleeves had tiny cuffs of the same trimming.

A pale fawn soft satin had an overskirt of chiffon full on the hips and reaching the hem behind. The sash was of the satin with a huge bow and ends at the back, the bodice opened on a vest of putty colored chiffon and had a turn-down collar of the same. The hat worn with this was quite fascinating, a medium-sized fine straw the shade of the gown with a ruche of tulle the same color and two nodding pink roses rising from a bunch of heliotrope, and a tie of rich green satin holding the tulle ruche in its place.

A dark blue charmeuse gown was lifted out of the ordinary run by flat narrow revers forming the collar at the back of dull Parma violet peau de soie; the inner vest was of fine ivory lace and tulle and a big tea rose was tucked in at the waist. At the back the waist was finished with two large buttons of blue while a fringed girdle of the Parma violet hung from the left side of the waist in front.

Three young girls walking about together made a pretty picture, for one was dressed in blue, one in white, and one in red, presenting the tricolor flag. The red was a particularly charming gown of charmeuse and cloth, the charmeuse making the foundation, while the cloth was introduced as a trimming, bordering the tunic to a depth of about 12 inches and cleverly cut so as to form the center of the back and front while the sleeves and sides were of the charmeuse—the turn-down collar of pale ecru chiffon and a big bow of black tulle where the V of the open neck ended. Buttons and a long oval buckle of dull purple enamel gave a lovely touch of color. The blue gown was very pretty also, with a blue crepe de chine plaited skirt and a liberty satin Russian blouse coat gathered in above the waist and with a deep chiffon collar in white coming down to the waist in front.

Another dark blue charmeuse gown which was very attractive had a long pointed tunic of blue chiffon, the selvage being the edge, a tulle and lace fichu in white leaving the neck bare, a beautiful shade of purple silk for the sash, and with this a large purple hat was worn.

The shadows were lengthening across the grass as we strolled round the grounds to look closer at a pergola covered with crimson ramblers in full bloom, ever and anon a barge went lazily by on the river, the thrushes and blackbirds began their evening songs, and as we made our way to the quaint little ferry that was to take us across to the homeward road we saw some of those weird dances of America danced in a circular open air room or veranda to the strains of a most excellent band.

WICKER TEA TABLE

A wicker tea table with two shelves or trays and handles, so that it may be easily carried about the lawn or veranda, costs $18, according to the New York Sun. It is stained soft dark green and the two trays are lined with bright cretanne that shows through their glass bottoms.

MUST LEARN TO
CURL FEATHERS

THERE is only one thing to do if you wear ostrich feathers, and that is to learn how to curl them, says the New York Sun. When the moist hat with feather trimming is removed put it if possible near a fire. Heat often restores a good deal of the lost curl. When this is not possible let the feather dry thoroughly, and then recur it with a nail file, the blunt edge of a knife, or some other steel or silver blade which is not sharp.

Work with one or two of the fronds of the feather at a time. Catch them between the thumb and the blade near the stem of the feather and slowly and firmly draw the thumb and the blade along the fronds to the edge. If necessary go over some of the feathers twice. It is surprising how rapidly this curling can be done; and if it is carefully done after a little practise the feather will look quite as well as if it had been curled by a professional.

DRESS FOR MIDSUMMER DAYS

Blouse with short sleeves and open neck

BAMBOO BASKETS

Baskets of the smoked bamboo are always in good taste, no matter to what use they are put, according to the New York News. At just this season the shops have a large supply of the low, flat baskets, with or without handles. They are designed primarily to be used for the table, as sandwich, cake, roll or fruit holders. Some are woven quite close while others are made with the open star pattern.

CANNED WHOLE

Select small, round tomatoes, scald by putting in wire basket and plunging once or twice in boiling water. Remove skins and put tomatoes in jars, add teaspoon salt to each jar, fill the jars with cold water, put jars in boiler, the bottom of which is protected with strips of wood; surround them partly with cold water, cover the boiler and boil 10 minutes after reaching boiling point.—Jamesville Gazette.

THE blouse that is made with short sleeves and open neck is certainly a boon for midsummer days. This one is dainty and attractive and is worn with one of the new skirts overlapped at the front and back.

As shown here, the blouse is made of cotton crepe with trimming of eyelet embroidery edged with color and with little fancy stitches joining the color to the white. The skirt is made of linen, but skirts of this kind can be made of any material heavy enough to be suited to the tailored finish and the blouse has many possibilities.

Treated in this way, it is designed for midsummer and for home wear, but, with just a few changes it can be completely transformed. If the neck is made high and the sleeves long in regulation shirtwaist style a tailored waist results. While, at first thought, the two are quite unlike, the same foundation answers for both. Waists of the tailored sort are always desirable for traveling and general wear and this season washable silk is extensively used as well as linen and cotton fabrics.

For the blouse with short sleeves and open neck, any pretty, dainty fabric will be appropriate and will be found just as satisfactory with a skirt to match, making a gown, as it is with the odd skirt. The skirt is made in four pieces and can be finished at either the high or the natural waist line.

For the blouse will be needed 3/4 yards of material 27, 2 1/2 yards 36 or 1 1/2 yards 44 inches wide, with one yard 18 for the collar and cuffs; for the skirt 4 1/2 yards 27, 2 1/2 yards 36 or 44 for linen or other material without up and down, 5 yards 27 or 36 or 3 1/2 yards 44 inches wide if there is figure or nap. The width of the skirt at the lower edge is two yards.

The pattern of the blouse (7855) is cut in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure; of the skirt (7507) from 22 to 32 inches waist measure. They can be bought at any May Manton agency, or will be sent by mail. Address 102 West Thirty-second street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

TRIED RECIPES

EGGS A LA CORTLANDT
CHOP half an onion very fine and brown lightly in a heaping spoon of sweet butter. Add six chopped chicken livers and fry this mixture 10 minutes. Drain off the butter and add two tablespoons brown sauce. Let it come to a boil and season with paprika and salt. If the mixture is thin, add a small quantity of cornstarch to thicken. Serve over two poached eggs. If the flavor is liked, four or five ripe olives, chopped fine, may be added just before the livers are poured over the toast and eggs. The toast should be cut round and all the crusty edges cut off.

WALNUT BISCUITS
Delicious and uncommon biscuits for afternoon tea may be made from the following recipe:

One pound of flour, four ounces of butter, the same quantity of sugar, one egg, and three ounces of finely-chopped walnuts. Beat butter and sugar together, adding the egg, thoroughly whisked. Stir in the flour very gradually, working it into the other ingredients till all becomes a smooth yellow paste. Turn on to a floured board and knead in the walnuts with the fingers. Roll out, cut into shapes with a fancy cutter, and bake in a slow oven for half an hour.

STUFFED TOMATOES
Select tomatoes of a size (about eight) and drop into boiling water just for a second. Then remove skin, scoop out inside, which can be saved for putting in soup. Take a 10 cent can of deviled ham, mince fine with mayonnaise dressing and three hard boiled eggs, add a little parsley and celery which has been chopped fine, juice of onion and a little Worcestershire sauce. Mix all well and place back in tomatoes, chill and serve on lettuce leaves. Put a teaspoon of mayonnaise dressing on top of each then cover lightly with grated hard boiled egg.

APPLE CAKE
One egg (beaten well), one cup sugar, half cup milk, melted butter size of egg, two cups flour sifted with teaspoon baking powder, salt, teaspoon vanilla. Mix as for cake dough, adding butter last. Put in bread pan and smooth out about 1 1/2 inches thick. Add on top sliced apples, sugar, cinnamon and a few currants.—San Francisco Call.

NOVEL FAVORS

So many bon voyage luncheons and end-of-the-season affairs are being given at the present time that favors for these occasions are largely confined to trifles which indicate a summer trip, says the New York Times. Tiny hat boxes of paper to be filled with bonbons are to be had at 5 cents each and dress suit cases are 24 cents. Trunks which hold a larger quantity of "sweets" are priced at 15 cents and little red picnic baskets cost 10 cents. These are rather newer than the others. But the newest of all these small items are the automobile hats. Made of colored crinkled paper these are 5 cents each. More carefully made of tan and black leatherette lined with silk, in which the candles are placed, they cost 24 cents each.

GOOD WAYS OF USING PEACHES

Baked, in roly poly, salad and puddings

WHILE there are few fruits more delicious in their natural state than peaches, this is a fruit that may be cooked or used as flavoring for desserts of various kinds in a most satisfactory way. Baked peaches are most tasty, according to the Newark News.

Ripe peaches should be selected for baking. Wash them carefully, but do not break the skin. Put as many in a baking dish as the dish will hold and then cover with cold water. Sprinkle light brown sugar on top and bake in a slow oven for an hour. Serve hot, with cream. They are delicious served on squares of sponge cake with whipped cream.

A simple sponge cake in layers and then put together with a peach filling is sure to please. For the filling take a cupful of peaches pressed through a sieve and add a cupful of whipped cream and half a cupful of powdered sugar. A few chopped nuts may be added if desired.

Peach whip is light and refreshing for a summer dessert. Soak half a boxful of gelatin in half a cupful of cold water and then add a cupful of boiling water. Cook some peaches and rub enough through a sieve to make a pint. Add the fruit to the dissolved gelatin and add enough lemon juice to give a good flavor. Set aside to get cold. As it begins to stiffen beat up the whites of three eggs and beat these into the peach mixture, using an egg beater. When so thick it cannot be beaten longer, turn into a wet mold and set away in the refrigerator to get very cold. Serve with whipped cream or boiled custard and do of the yolks of the eggs.

Tapoca pudding is another good hot weather dessert. Soak a cupful of the tapoca in a pint of cold water, and when all the water is taken up put on the stove to boil in a double boiler, adding more water if necessary to make the tapoca transparent. Add half a cupful of sugar, a cupful of chopped peaches and turn the mixture into a mold to harden. Serve with cream.

Ripe peaches cut in half and the cavities filled with minced puts, crumbled macaroons or fresh shredded coconut, and topped with whipped cream, are delicious whether served on sponge cake or not.

Peach roly poly is made after this recipe: Cream quarter of a cupful of shortening with a half cupful of sugar; then add two well beaten eggs, and half a cupful of milk. Stir in a cupful of flour sifted twice with a teaspoonful of baking powder. If more flour is needed to make the batter stiff to roll, add it. Roll into an oblong piece, spread with sliced peaches, sprinkle with sugar and chopped almonds, wet the dough along the edge with cold water, and roll. Bake in a quick oven. Cut in slices when serving and serve with whipped cream or any preferred pudding sauce.

Peaches are delicious served as a salad. Peel ripe peaches and cut in halves, carefully removing the stones. Fill the center with a mixture of cream cheese, chopped nuts and salad dressing. Serve with French dressing made with lemon or with mayonnaise to which whipped cream has been added.

A peach cornstarch pudding is made after this recipe: Scald a cupful of milk and then add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch wet down in a quarter of a cupful of water, a quarter of a cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Cook for five minutes. Take from the stove and add a teaspoonful of lemon juice, half a teaspoonful of almond extract, the whites of two eggs beaten stiff and half a cupful of cream, whipped. Color pink with some vegetable coloring. Line custard cups with the custard, lay half a peach in each cup and then fill with the custard mixture. When cold turn out, sprinkle with chopped almonds and serve with a boiled custard made of the yolks of the eggs and a cupful of milk.

When canning boiling hot fruit drop a silver knife in the jar, and thus effectually prevent breaking. Take the knife out when the jar is nearly full, fill up, and seal as usual.—Mother's Magazine.

JACOB STEENDAM, "NOCH VASTER" Poet Who Served New Netherland as Good Citizen and With His Muse Sketched in Early American Literature Series

IN the plantation period of American writing the poets of New Netherland lead, not by the quantity of their product but by its intrinsic poetical quality.

The greater part of the verse written in Virginia and New England during this period, with which the whole New Netherland period practically corresponds, was either narrative or theological. Of either of these kinds of verse the three poets of New Netherland, Jacob Steendam, Henricus Selys and Niclaus de Sille, wrote very little. "Their product"—it has been said—"was more of an art and a delight." They wrote songs in praise of beauty, verses of affection, though not the love songs of the court; they wrote of the beauty of the earth and the deep emotions of patriotism. When they took the events of daily living for their subjects it was more to idealize than to relate. More over they wrote when the inspiration seized them, very seldom because occasion demanded, though Selys several times celebrated events in the lives of his friends.

Of the youth of Jacob Steendam almost nothing is known, except that he was born in Enkhuizen in 1616. Records show that in 1640 he desired to be sent to New Netherland as Ziekentrooster, the lay reader of the Dutch church, but was adjudged too young. For about seven years previous to 1640 he was in Guinea, whither he sailed in a fleet of 27 vessels belonging to the West India Company.

Going forth upon this adventure he wrote:
"Holland! Holland! See, we sever
Like a fleet, each veering over
Toward his far appointed place.
Farewell! Farewell! whatever betide us
This we know, that God will guide us
Praised be His grace."

Sea Verse Vigorous

His verses of the sea belong to this period, and Mr. Innes quotes the following stanza as an instance of their fine vigor:

"Ye ploughers of the ocean
And harrowers of the sea!
The ship Deventer goes before
And with the Roe sail we.
To the Guinea coast of Africa we hie,
To the golden Moorish land
Wherein God's mighty hand
Hath planted our dominion far and nigh."

Returning to Holland, Steendam married Sara de Roschou, and for three years they lived in Amsterdam. His first book of poems was published there in 1652, the same year in which he came to New Netherland.

The name Steendam is simply stone-dam, and as if in whimsical allusion to this, he was accustomed to write "noch vaster" (still firmer) after it, so that the phrase and the name have been used in some instances as if the latter were part of the former. Oddly enough, his home in New Amsterdam was on Stone street, which had acquired its name by being the first paved street in the province, probably the first in the country. It seems that a certain tidy dame, no other than one of the Van Courtlandts, had complained that she could not keep her house clean because of the dust, and complained so wisely and perseveringly that the city council was induced to lay the street with cobblestones. Whereupon the people came from far and near to admire. This was in 1657-8, and it was not long before other streets were similarly paved. There are bits of this cobblestone pavement in lower Manhattan today that are thought to date from this time, and Stone street has retained its name, if not its original cobble.

Steendam's house was also somewhat unique, for seeing some builders at work one day trying to make their own bricks and burning many of them black, he surprised the community by using these discarded bricks as trimming upon the fair Holland brick of which his house was constructed; showing the poet to have been of a practical turn as well as having an artist's eye for contrast. In one of the early prints of New Amsterdam this house, standing somewhat on the outskirts of the closely built street, shows a second story, but otherwise is like all the others, with its stepped gables turned toward the street. It had a garden running down to the East river and in it grew vegetables and flowers.

Mystic Haunts Night

There are traditions that the poet walked much by moonlight about the little city bounded on three sides by water, and on the north by the wall built for protection that ran across from river to river and left its name to the street that now, the world over, means finance.

Steendam was something of a planter, having several small farms about Manhattan and on Long Island. The source of a supposition that he was an upholsterer is his bill, found among some old papers, for a dozen cushions supplied to the burgomasters to be used in the town hall. But it is much more probable, in the absence of any other hint that he was of that trade, that the cushions were merchandise consigned to him from Holland, or that he may have been acting as the direct agent of the city in procuring them. In a list of contributors to a fund raised for the public defense he is written a trader; certain court minutes show him to have been a

From prose to poetry is the turn reached in the present paper on the New Netherland group of writers in the series on Early American Literature. The subject of this sketch is seen, perhaps, happier as a scholar than as a man of trade, although found at different times more or less active in both pursuits; a man who ornamented his house with bricks discarded by builders and one who had no hesitancy in turning his wit upon himself.

somewhat shrewd business man, and with all his literary and religious tendencies, he was not enlightened beyond his time in the matter of slavery, for there is record of a petition addressed by him to the director and council, asking leave to engage in a slave trading venture. Whether he carried out this purpose the records do not state.

Steendam was not in New Amsterdam at the time of its surrender, and did not fulfill what had been his expectation to return, having apparently no desire to exchange his Dutch citizenship and become an English subject. Instead he went to Batavia in Java. It was then that he wrote his address to Amsterdam:

"Where in my youth I came.
From you my last departure I must tell,
And all my friends to gether, fare-you-well
I leave you in God's name."

His Bent Is Found

At Batavia he found employment for which he was well fitted and which must have satisfied his desires better than anything theretofore. This was in the superintendency of the Orphan House, and as lay reader to the Dutch congregation. It is probably from the nature of this work, in which he continued until the close of his career in 1671, that he is often alluded to as a preacher or even as "Domine" Steendam, a title no Dutch Reformed churchman ever assumed unless he was university-bred for the ministry. His wife was governess of the house and succeeded him as its head, and their daughter Vredegond succeeded her.

A fine portrait of Steendam, by the Dutch painter Krooman, is extant, and a print is in the Lenox collection of the New York public library. It shows an attractive face, very thoughtful, somewhat serious and patient, conveying a hint of sad experiences; but with a sweet, direct gaze. The portrait, showing only the head and shoulders, is oval in shape, and is framed in olive branches bearing fruit and banded together by ribbons that float out at the top, corresponding to sprays of olive arranged in each of the lower corners. It rests on a pedestal, upon which are these lines by the Dutch poet Johan Nieuwhoff:

"His spirits gifts divine set forth in flowing song
Unto God's people give a harp which chimes the ear
With David's heavenly theme. His art,
what song can praise
The hymn of praise to God transcendeth
all our lays."

Steendam loved New Netherland and served her not only as a good citizen but with his muse. His first poem after becoming a New Netherlander was written in her aid in the troublous conditions uppermost at the time of his arrival. It is called "The Complaint of New Amsterdam to Her Mother." The second was "In Praise of New Netherland," and the third, "Spurring Verses," was not a hunting song, but intended as an incentive to colonists to make New Netherland their home. These poems, in connection with "Den Distel-vink" and a book of verse published in Batavia, will be considered in a following paper.

(The writer is indebted to Henry C. Murphy's "Anthology" and to J. H. Innes in his "New Amsterdam and Its People.")

Committee on Nominations Ready to Report to Business Meeting of Teachers' Organization Holding Annual Gathering

GRADING IN QUESTION

SALT LAKE CITY—When the nominating committee of the National Education Association presents its report at the business session Thursday morning, the name of Robert J. Aley, president of the University of Maine, will be advised for president, according to information given out Tuesday night.

The nomination of the committee is considered equivalent to election. Other nominations will be: Carroll G. Pearce, Milwaukee, secretary; David B. Johnson, South Carolina, member of the executive committee.

Speakers of Tuesday included William H. Campbell, principal D. S. Wentworth school, Chicago, and Thomas E. Thompson, superintendent of schools, Leominster, Mass.

Mr. Campbell questioned the wisdom of classifying children by grades. "A herd of people," he said, "never constituted anything but a machine. It is only when individuals have broken loose from the herd and have found means for individual development that we have been startled by outbursts of genius."

He declared that out of the schools must come strong men and women who cannot be controlled by routine processes but shall be able to map out new charts and lead the advance march of civilization.

Mr. Thompson, speaking in a vein counter to that of the Chicago principal, observed that "Minimum Essentials" is the topic most discussed in the educational world of today, and he urged the value of efficiency because of the desirability of making every motion, every minute and every bit of material count. "Whenever education deals with growth in life, in emotion, and character," he said, "we may never know the most efficient method of procedure, but where education concerns itself with mechanical, machine-like processes, there is no excuse for waste. Here the work of the teacher should be 100 per cent efficient."

"The teaching of facts of number, of spelling, of correct usage in language and deportment and of geography should be ready to submit to efficiency tests, and the success or failure of the teaching should be measured as any machine-like process is measured in the world's work."

LIBRARIES AND LIBRARIANS

THAT the New York state library holds a broader conception of its function and has realized a larger part of that conception than any other state library is borne out by the following statements in its newly issued handbook:

"The state library exists equally for the organized state government, the schools and other cultural institutions of the state and for the private citizen. As a state institution it exists primarily to promote efficiency in government. As a reference library it aims to promote research. As part of the educational system of the state it cooperates with libraries, schools and study clubs in the broad work of education."

"To the citizen of the state it offers books of all kinds, books for entertainment, books for instruction, books for research. Where there are no libraries it offers small collections of books to be used in the homes of the people; where libraries or registered schools exist, its system of interlibrary loans places the resources of the library at the disposal of the citizen. It meets the demand of the citizen for a larger range of reading than his own resources or those of the local library can supply. It offers material for the special study of topics not adequately treated in small collections as well as the special treatise required by the research of the historian, the man of letters, the engineer, or the scientist."

Every summer I spend a little time at a mountain resort frequented by people who are abundantly able to buy all the latest fiction as it appears, says Elva L. Bascom in the Wisconsin Library Bulletin. I constantly observe the books being read, and while most of them are novels, only a very small proportion are less than a year old. These people provide for their vacation novels they know to be worth reading. When librarians realize what the effect of making this habit universal would have on the publishers and through them on the authors, in at least partially checking this wasteful and wasteful flood of poor fiction, I am sure they will wish to fall into line just so far as it is in their power to do so.

The question of library fines needs to be considered from many standpoints if justice is to be done to all. Some libraries allow a fine to accumulate until it amounts to the price of the book; to pay such a fine often works hardship and, that, too, to the class of patrons whom, perhaps, the library is trying hardest to reach. A way out seems to have been found by the public library at Volvorn, Mass., where a system of fines has been tried with success. It is described by the librarian, George Hill Evans, who says: "Our fine of two cents a day ceases to accumulate at the end of 10 days, making 20 cents the maximum amount that may be charged on any overdue book. In default of and until payment thereof the privileges of the card are withheld until one month has elapsed. At the end of this period the fine is cancelled and the borrower is returned to good standing."

The Chicago library board, says the July Library Journal, has adopted a cooperative scheme for the establishment of branch libraries in manufacturing and commercial plants. Wherever a considerable number of people are working together, the board stands ready to establish a branch library, provided a suitable room is set aside for displaying the books, and the salary of the necessary librarian and attendants is paid by the employer.

Dr. Paul Schwenke, first director of the Royal library of Berlin, gives in a recently published pamphlet his impressions of libraries in the United States. In one month Dr. Schwenke visited 36 libraries in this country and he says that what especially impressed him was the splendid buildings, the long hours they were kept open, the extent to which books were accessible to the public, and the distribution of branch libraries and delivery stations over the whole city. He also speaks highly of the use that is made of every possible agency that will aid in getting books to all classes of people, mentioning among these agencies traveling libraries, children's libraries and cooperation with the schools.

In the discussion which is going on in Hungary among prominent men concerning the way in which the public library at Budapest is to be equipped and managed it is interesting to note the emphasis that is laid upon the advisability of adopting, as far as possible, American methods.

We hear much about the need of providing children in rural districts with desirable books, but that there is still something to be done for the city child is evident from the following incident told in the Iowa Library Quarterly: A city teacher recently asked her fourth grade pupils to bring their story books to school. She had noticed that they did not seem to know many of the old familiar stories. They brought a very strange and miscellaneous collection of books and called them their story books. Mary J. Holmes, Mrs. Southworth, Dickens, Hugo and Elsie Dinmore were all represented. There was scarcely a child's book among them and none of the beautiful classic tales which we consider the heritage of every modern child. These children came from families that owned their own homes and they were well cared for in other ways; but the parents had not cared for books and did not know how to instill that love in their children.

The teacher reported her experiment to the librarian of the public library and soon she was provided with books to loan to the children for home reading and also to aid her in the work of the schoolroom.

In an article describing the county library systems of the various states, the New Jersey library bulletin has this to say of Minnesota, where the hamlets to be reached are almost inaccessible: One enthusiastic county librarian tells of her trips to fishing villages, reached only by steamer, three times a week during the summer, and even then the librarian and books must be transferred to a small rowboat before the shore is reached. This county library has 10 stations, but has the ambition to cover 23, one in each schoolhouse in the county. Personal visits of the librarian are found necessary to arouse enthusiasm in these out-of-the-way places where people are living under the conditions of 40 years ago, and where the love of books seems unknown. The librarian must be an adaptable lover of outdoor life as in many cases it is necessary to walk miles between stations, where it is almost impossible to ride.

New York libraries give this helpful item concerning the library at Watertown, N. Y.: The librarian has lately been experimenting in an attempt to increase interest in and the reading of some of the great books of the past. First he made out a list of 14 novels which represented his own opinion as to the greatest novels in all literature. These books were placed on a special shelf, and much publicity was given to them, both by direct notice in the local papers and the inevitable discussion that arose over the selection. This brief list was soon followed by a similar list of the world's greatest biographies, with a like display of the works on a special shelf and similar publicity. Other classes of great books will be brought out in this way at intervals. The result has been to give these books, for a time at least, the place in the public mind and public demand, that is usually held by the latest "best sellers."

BARREL PROBLEM BOTHERS FARMERS

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—The Hampden County Improvement League is assisting the farmers in Hampden county and neighboring counties in buying their apple barrels for this season's crop at a price from two to five cents cheaper than they can get them elsewhere. This year apple barrels are bound to be in greater demand than ever before, due to the new law, which went into effect July 1.

Last year the price of apple barrels started at 33 cents each and rose as high as 50 cents each in a few instances. Many fruit men could not obtain apple barrels when they needed them for even 50 cents. This year the cooperative firms have already raised the lowest prices upon their barrels two or three cents each.

COUNTY OFFICERS MAY SEEK COURTS

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—At a continued conference here today the seven Republican county commissioners whose terms of office expire Oct. 1 of this year, and whose successors the Governor has appointed because of the disagreement between the two houses of the General Assembly, probably will definitely decide whether they shall take the question of the right of the Governor to appoint their successors to the courts or retire from office without proceeding to a settlement of this much mooted question in a legal way.

It has been fairly well established that a majority of the seven commissioners favor taking this matter to the courts and unless the minority of the seven can prevail, by argument or by advice of counsel, the plan of the majority will undoubtedly be put through.

HOME MADE BREAD LOSING

Editorial Comment on the Resort to the City Product Raises a Question of Economy

On the front porch of the country store, back on the hills, there are stacked the boxes with red, white and blue slats slightly separated for the admission of air and bearing the familiar name of a city bread factory. They are "empties" on their way back to the city to be refilled with the paraffin-paper wrapped loaves again to take their product to this or some other possibly remote point of distribution. This is the purely country town, its population entirely made up of farmers' families. In every kitchen there is the ample range, not so long ago known as a cook-stove, with its possibility of baking the needed loaves of the household but allowed to stand idle now through the time that would once have served for the baking. The making of bread, formerly one of the triumphs of the housewife, has given way to the purchase of the product of a huge bakery a hundred miles away. Is it soon to be classed among the lost arts of the household?

Breadmaking has admittedly been one of the trying occupations of the home. There was always an element of uncertainty as to the product. Every new bake was an experiment, and its product a topic of discussion at its first appearance on the table. The good breadmaker was known to the entire population of the town. It was a distinction to be so classed. Pride in the product was one of the delights of the housewife or the seal of skill on the diploma of the "hired girl," a personage, by the way, who has disappeared to just about the same extent as the home breadmaking.

There is awakened in the observer who first beholds the long transported bread-boxes, after his astonishment at this invasion has passed, the question as to the economy of the change. The reckoning of the number of loaves a barrel of flour will produce, and this information is given out as an inducement to buy a particular brand, and a counting of the cost of the ingredients and of the making will yield no other result than that the expenditure for the baker's loaf is not economy. Is it an example of the addition to the cost of living that comes from the loss of home-producing and the buying of the manufactured substitute?

The commodities of the country store have greatly changed in the course of a few years. It is not so long ago that the foreign fruits, beyond lemons and oranges, first appeared there. It is within recollection that the bunch of bananas was a curiosity and a good share of the customers would ask what they were. Now the grape fruit is sold all the winter through in every one of these stores. The apples were all sold in the fall and are being consumed across the sea or wherever else they are a luxury. The common dairy products are no longer produced at home. Butter is sold to the farmers at the store. It is ancient history that cheese-making disappeared. The production at home of the common articles of the table is going through the same process, apparently, as long ago befell the making of the articles of clothing.

Whatever sentiment there is about the old-time cooking is of no avail in the brief for home-made bread. It is not even open apparently to any argument as to its economy. The fact that it is the age of the ready-made is more powerful than all the pleadings. Still, those bread-boxes on the store porch look foreign.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Secretary Burleson made a sensible change in postal regulations when he ordered that parcel post stamps should be interchangeable. The purpose of the distinctive parcel stamps was, of course, mainly to enable department officials to keep a clear record of the new package business in its early stages. That was the easiest way of recording the volume of parcel post business. All doubts concerning the wisdom of establishing the new branch have disappeared. It is popular and generally convenient. It can be made more so; and the regulation permitting the indiscriminate use of stamps recognizes that. The collect on delivery provision is a recent welcome addition. Other changes are being contemplated with reference to rates. Lower carrying charges will surely mean increases in the volume of business handled by the postoffice. This will be fulfilling the intent of the law.—Buffalo (N. Y.) Commercial.

Detailed figures for the Alaskan census of 1910 are now available. They show, as noted before in these columns, that this region of 577,390 square miles has only 64,356 inhabitants; and has added only 764 persons to its population in 10 years. The new census reveals further that of this meager population 40 per cent is Indian, besides a considerable sprinkling of Chinese and Japanese; and that five-sixths of the white persons in Alaska are males. Plainly, home-making has not progressed very far on this "last frontier."

There is room for many homes in Alaska. To repeat a comparison made before, that territory is as large as Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland combined. These countries, lying in the same latitude as Alaska, have some 12,000,000 inhabitants instead of 64,000. The agricultural resources of Alaska are less than those of the Scandinavian peninsula; but its forest resources are quite as great, and its mineral riches are greater than the north of Europe can show.—Chicago (Ill.) Journal.

The Edmonton Bulletin quotes President J. D. McArthur of the Edmonton & Dunvegan railway as having announced that his railway will be opened for business in the fall between Edmonton and Mirror Landing on the Athabasca river. This will materially improve the means now available of reaching the Grande Prairie and Peace river region.

The movement of population into the vast area north and northwest of Edmonton is proceeding far more rapidly than most of us in the East understand. During the past month 265 sturdy Hollanders, the advance guard of a colony of 600, have gone north to make their homes in the vicinity of Dunvegan. Despite the lack of railway facilities there has been for years a steady stream of adventurous settlers northward bound, and when the railway projects now under way are completed the rush into what a few years ago was regarded as the barren wastes of the North will be as great as it is now into central Saskatchewan.

It is not improbable that in the fertile valleys of the Peace river and its tributaries the cattle-raising industry of North America will yet be centered. Texas and Mexico will always have their share of cattle raising on the range, but the extreme heat and the comparative absence of water will be perpetual drawbacks. In the Peace river the rainfall is much greater, and the melting of the snow in the mountains provides an ample supply of water for lake and river during the hot months of summer. The long hours of sunshine and daylight bring crops to maturity in less than 100 days from the time the seed is sown. Roots and grasses grow to the same extraordinary dimensions as in northern Ontario, and the winters are said to be milder than in more southerly latitudes where the altitude is greater. As the Edmonton Bulletin says, it is quite evident that the settlers who are going into the far Northwest find something worth staying with. They should be aided and encouraged in every possible way by the government of Alberta and of the Dominion. "There is nothing Canada needs so much today as men who will use the land for the production of foodstuffs.—Toronto (Ont.) Globe.

CONSERVATION CONGRESS PLANS FOR CONFERENCE

Federal Lease of Water Power Rights and Tax Exemption on Improved Forest Lands to Be Topics This Fall

CONTEST IS EXPECTED

WASHINGTON — Federal lease of water power rights and tax exemption on improved forest lands are to be the leading topics of discussion in the next national conservation congress to be held at the capital in the middle of November, according to a decision reached by the executive committee.

By far the most important topic in the eyes of all parties is that involving the development of the national water power resources by private capital. Since the crystallization of this rapidly growing question in the Connecticut river dam bill, which failed of passage in the last Congress, its importance has received general recognition. The conservationists, who have of late withdrawn from their radical stand for absolute reservation of the national resources, have admitted that the development of these resources by private interests upon certain terms is not incompatible with their policy of federal control and are supporting legislation which has this end in view.

Among the private water power interests the conservationists claim a number of good allies, including those corporations who have conceded that private leasing and government regulation form the only compromise ground over which water power development can travel with any rapidity. The majority of the private interests are opposed to this acceptance of strict federal jurisdiction over the streams and rivers and, according to the conservationists, have allied themselves with the state rights politicians to defeat any legislation drafted along these lines.

Practically the same situation exists as to the relaxation of improved forest lands. This question had its origin in the idea of the conservationists to encourage proper care of private forests by offering taxation privileges.

In brief, the plan is to eliminate from the category of improved lands all forests which are cared for and cut according to approved methods of modern forestry, although such lands would be subject to additional taxation under the present laws. Although this would seem to be to the benefit of the private land owners, this plan has met with strong opposition on their part. It is declared by them that any such legislation would but fix more firmly the federal control of the forest lands, which in their estimation should be in the care of the states. And for this reason the coming congress in November will see the conflict between the conservationists and the private interests in this proposition as well.

According to the officials of the conservation congress, those opposed to the plans of the two national conservation organizations, the Conservation Congress and the Conservation Association, are sending out statements to the effect that there is a lack of harmony between them. These officials have taken occasion to deny this in a recent statement which says:

"One of the important factors in the executive committee's selection of Washington was the fact that the national capital is the headquarters of the National Conservation Association. The congress and the association are working in close and complete harmony and this made the committee feel that it was desirable to have the congress held at Washington."

RAILROAD LINK TO CONNECT BOSTON AND GUATEMALA CITY

All-Rail Route From the Central American Country to Massachusetts Capital Soon Completed, Statement of Consul

LARGE BANANA CROP

From Boston to Guatemala City, Guatemala, by rail the entire distance is the prospect that draws nearer as steps are taken to complete soon the railroad link connecting Guatemala with Mexico, according to A. C. Garcia, consul for Guatemala in this city, who also says that owing to the enjoyment of peace for years his country is developing rapidly along general lines. Mr. Garcia also says he is advised that Boston may soon receive cargoes of the bananas grown in Guatemala, fruit that now goes to supply the middle West.

"President Cabrera has enjoyed for two terms the honor of being the chief magistrate of the republic," said Mr. Garcia. "At the last election he was again reelected for another term of six years. This of itself would show the confidence and esteem held by the public for President Cabrera.

"The constitution is most liberal; our laws are based on equity, and as they are enforced by President Cabrera, he is termed a dictator by his enemies. Under his able administration of affairs, railroads are being built in different directions in the republic and President Cabrera has interested himself in the establishment of schools throughout the republic and colleges in the city of Guatemala; English is taught in all the schools.

"Guatemala is visited by many foreigners, some sight-seeing, other making investments; then again a certain class go there who get in trouble, intentionally to produce difficulties between Guatemala and the United States. This latter is known to the government, and a careful watch kept over them to prevent their carrying out their nefarious purposes. They are backed by the enemies of the republic."

It is to have the year's activities of the two bodies culminate in an enthusiastic gathering of the congress at their common point of concentration. It was agreed by representatives of both organizations that great benefit for the cause of conservation could be gained by having the congress assemble in Washington. As the center of conservation work, the capital city affords exceptional facilities for the deliberation of the congress because of the immediate availability of the experts and statistics in the government's work along these lines.

"Special importance attaches to the selection of Washington for the reason that certain private interests opposed to conservation have recently sought to make it appear that there is lack of harmony between the conservation congress and the Conservation Association. The fact that Washington was chosen after consultation between officers of both organizations shows that the congress and the association are working as a unit with identical aims. The meeting of the congress is six months distant, but there are already indications of a record attendance.

"An important phase of conservation to be considered at the Washington meeting involves the tremendous fire waste in the cities of America. At the request of the national board of fire underwriters, the executive committee has agreed to give place on the program for discussion of this momentous question. The vast loss to the country through preventable fires will be shown in concrete and comprehensive form and means considered for minimizing this unnecessary waste."

government and try to make capital out of their misdeeds, furnishing alarming reports for the political enemies who have been exiled from the country, starting up reports of abuses to American citizens, which fortunately are not heeded by the United States government, as these matters are generally investigated carefully and the truth furnished the government.

"Guatemala is enjoying prosperity; the coffee crop is one of the largest ever gathered; over 1,000,000 sacks will be exported this year. The sugar industry is increasing. The exportation of bananas will reach over 2,000,000 bunches this year, and a very superior quality of fruit, most of which goes to New Orleans, supplying the middle West, which is one of the largest markets of the country for that fruit.

SWORD CANNOT CUT WATER JET

A factory in Grenoble, France, utilizes the water of a reservoir situated in the mountains at a height of 200 yards. The water reaches the factory through a vertical tube of the same length, with a diameter of considerably less than an inch, the jet being used to move the turbine, says Harper's Weekly.

Experiments have shown that the strongest men cannot cut the jet with the best tempered sword, and in some instances the blade has been broken into fragments without deflecting a drop of the water, and with as much violence as a pane of glass may be shattered by a blow from an iron bar.

It has been calculated that a jet of water a small fraction of an inch in thickness, moving with sufficient velocity, could not be cut by a rifle bullet.

The people of Athens will make every effort to have the road extended to Athens, a distance of only 14 miles.

CHILDREN FINE GARDENERS

WHEN INTEREST IS AROUSED

Back to the Soil Movement in Portland, Ore., Gets Young Ones Closer to Nature and Brings Out Quite Useful Achievements for Very Small Outlay

IN school gardening the children of Portland, Ore., excel. Last year about 60,000 children of that city were engaged in some form of agricultural endeavor. This year it is hoped to increase this number to 125,000.

A feature of the work that is worthy of consideration by communities that hesitate to undertake an activity of this kind because of the expense, is that the cash outlay for the first year's work when over 30,000 children were provided for, was but $600. The school gardens of Portland were an outgrowth of the back-to-the-soil movement for which this thriving city of the West was feeling a need, as well as the congested metropolises of the East.

It is acknowledged by the leaders of this movement that in this, as in other reforms, the real remedy must be administered through the children. They begin, therefore, by interesting the child in growing things, confident that if the child has awakened in him a joy in nature he is more likely to seek the smaller towns and communities if not the country in later years, than he is to be content with the city tenements or the brick and stone of more favored residence districts.

The work was undertaken in Portland by the Greater Portland Plans Association. They started in at once to interest the whole of the more than 30,000 school children of the city above the third grade in the work. Through representatives the matter of the gardens was presented to the children of each school, the sympathy of principals and teachers having first been secured, and this cooperation is regarded as one of the most effective factors in the success of the work.

"Garden contest" societies were organized in each school, with officers and regular times for meeting. At these the children talked over the garden problem and offered advice and information among themselves. Zeal was kindled, enthusiasm grew and interest was maintained. Ground for the purpose of gardening was secured in various ways. A few children found it naturally in the vicinity of their own homes, if not in their own backyards. To some, small plots in the various city parks were assigned, and not a few provided gardens for themselves in window boxes, soap boxes, barrels, whatever could be found, in fact, that could be made to do. Surprisingly good results were obtained from these.

As a means of intelligently guiding the work of the children, a bulletin was sent to each contestant, telling how the ground should be prepared and the seeds procured, and naming various kinds that were recommended for cultivation. In addition to this an advisory committee, made up of interested citizens who knew what to do, made personal visits to the gardens and gave helpful recommendations and other valuable assistance.

This personal contact of the leaders in the movement with the children is regarded as important in giving greater insight and broader sympathies to the latter and enriching the lives of the children at the same time that it extends their outlook.

Except in a few instances no attempt was made to provide seeds or tools for these young gardeners. This was partly because it was wished to conduct the work as economically as possible in its first, experiment year, and partly to keep it free from any thought of charity. The $600 that was spent was contributed by the Greater Portland Plans Association, the livestock exchange and the Bankers and Retail Merchants Associations.

At the end of the school year about 30 schools made good showings at the large exhibit held in the armory. Prizes were awarded by judges from the Oregon Agricultural College and a committee appointed by the state superintendent of schools. The prizes consisted of cups, money and ribbons.

This year it is planned to carry on the work to a greater extent than before.

RATIONAL GOLF

By STEVEN ARMSTRONG

Mark Allerton goes on to say in his editorial on the subject of English or Scottish supremacy in golf: "We take a kind of dismal pride in proclaiming our profound ignorance of the simplest rules of arithmetic. It is with some trepidation, therefore, that we venture to state that, in proportion to the population, the number of golfers in Scotland greatly exceeds those of England. After all, this seems to be the crux of the question. The strength of a country does not lie in the capabilities of a few individuals, but in the efficiency of the nation as a whole. Mere numbers, of course, do not imply efficiency, but there is not a golfer living—even among those who scramble round a Scottish links on a Saturday afternoon—who does not strive to this end. The mere fact that a man is a golfer, therefore, means that he is trying to become efficient. He cannot help it. So that numbers in golf are not without significance. But this question of supremacy is too academical, too vague, to be of too importance. It would be almost as reasonable to ask who obtains the most enjoyment from their golf—Englishmen or Scotchmen? To this problem as to the one which the controversialists have recently propounded, there can be no definite answer. The joyous plodders in both countries, to whom we have previously referred, will continue to play without a thought of making history. If they play well they will have that satisfied feeling that is vouchsafed to no one but the golfer who is playing rather than his normal game. And if they play badly they can at least console themselves with the reflection that at least they have had plenty of exercise."

Garden Smith also treats it editorially in Golf Illustrated, remarking that it is sometimes said that Scottish golf has seen its best days and that the younger school of Scottish players are no longer a match for their English contemporaries. The recent championship records are quoted to show the growing ascendancy of the Southern, and it is pointed out that the average English player not only plays more, but practices in a more systematic and careful way than his Scottish rival.

It is true that the average English player gives more time to the game and has also greater facilities for learning it properly than the Scottish. The bulk of Scottish golf is played on public courses which, as we point out in our editorial, are so crowded that play on them is a mere travesty of the game. A study of the finer points of the game is impossible under such conditions, and when it is considered that the great majority of these public course golfers are new converts and self-taught, it is not surprising if they have not yet produced champions.

Yet in spite of the fact that the English golfers who play on private courses, with every advantage for learning the game, now outnumber the Scottish golfers similarly situated by about 10 to one, the superiority of the English is far from apparent. The statistics of the amateur international match, at any rate, should give pause to those English critics who are saying that the golfing glory of Scotland has departed. In spite of the enormous advantage in numbers and in facilities for play enjoyed by the English golfers, there are still a dozen Scottish players able to give a good account of the best 12 that England can muster.

GOLD CUP AT HORSE SHOW WON BY JUMPING OF RUSSIAN TEAM

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The gala performance at the international horse show, at which the President of the French republic and the King and Queen were present, had a special interest for France, as it was considered that France might secure the King Edward VII. gold cup for army teams over the jumps, as the personal property of the army by winning the international jumping competition for the third time. France won in 1909 and 1911, Belgium in 1910, and Russia in 1912.

Great Britain on the first run had six and one half faults, France was the worst, and Russia rather better with two and one half faults. Belgium did not do so well and went out of the competition on the second run, Canada also failing. Italy and Sweden were out of the competition by first run faults alone and the winner of the cup had necessarily to be a nation of the triple entente. France was ahead of Great Britain at the end of the second run but some magnificent jumping by Russia gave that country first place, as was the case last year, France being once more second and Great Britain third. After a perfect display of horsemanship by the French cavalry school officers and a parade of winners the King and President left amid great cheering.

ONE OF THREE MAKES FIRST STAGE IN FLYING BOAT RACE

CHICAGO—Three of the 10 entrants in the 900-mile hydro-aeroplane endurance cruise from here to Detroit via lakes Michigan and Huron started Tuesday afternoon and one of them, Beck with Havens, carrying a passenger, J. P. R. Von Planck of Fishkill, N. Y., owner of the machine, reached Michigan City safely. The other two members of the group that got away Walter Johnson of Bath, N. Y., and Anthony Jannus of St. Louis and his mechanic were obliged to come down in Lake Michigan. Both were picked up. Johnson intends to start again today, but Jannus is considered out of the contest.

Roy I. Francis of San Francisco, who rose from Clarendon Beach in the northern part of the city, did not attempt the flight to Michigan City, but landed instead at Grant Park, the starting point for the contest. He will start from here today in an effort to catch up with Havens.

Havens left here a few minutes before 1 o'clock and dropped into the smooth water of Michigan City harbor at 1:43. The distance is about 60 miles via the air route. Macatawa bay is his next scheduled stop.

Jannus said he would endeavor to recover the engine of the machine, which is adrift somewhere on the lake supported by the pontoons and woodwork of the craft. He said a broken propeller brought him down.

SENATORS CHECK TARIFF MEASURE BEFORE PRINTING

Chairman Simmons Gets Republican Analysis and Sets Subcommittee to Work of Comparing Bill With Criticism

NEW TAX ESTIMATED

WASHINGTON—Sub-committees of the Senate finance committee are busy checking up the tariff bill today with the hope of sending it to the printer tonight. In the meanwhile Chairman Simmons is completing the committee report.

Senator Simmons turned a trick on Republican leaders Tuesday, when he got possession of a lengthy analysis of the Democratic tariff bill which had been prepared under the direction of Senator Smoot, pointing out what the Republicans claim are serious defects in the measure.

Senator Smoot had delayed for a month the introduction of the analysis, despite the insistence of Senator Simmons that it be printed. On the last day of the caucus, when the Republicans were assured that the Democrats were through with the bill, Senator Smoot consented to send the document in for the printer. But the Democrats have not yet printed their bill and have time to make corrections and laugh at their opponents, inasmuch as debate will not begin until next week.

Knowing that the Republican document might contain valuable pointers, Senator Simmons directed the finance sub-committees to go over their schedules and compare with the Smoot analysis.

He said some of the analyses point out errors that could be corrected, but that much of the document was found to be argument.

Total yearly revenues of the corporation tax and the income tax section of the new tariff bill, as revised by the Senate, were estimated Tuesday at $106,625,000 by the commissioner of internal revenue in statistics prepared for Chairman Simmons of the finance committee. The corporation tax is expected to yield $37,000,000 and the income tax $69,625,000.

As the income tax cannot operate for the first two months of this year, the total revenue for 1913 will be decreased to $95,000,000. These estimates are higher than those for the bill as it passed the House.

NATIONALITIES TO BE HONORED IN BAND CONCERTS

Special programs with music of the different nationalities and in celebration of certain events will be the characteristic feature of the Boston Common municipal band concerts, commencing Sunday, when the program will be in honor of the G. A. R. veterans on their return from the reunion at Gettysburg.

The concerts begin at 3.30 o'clock. There will be German Sunday, French Sunday, Swedish and Norwegian Sunday. Wagner day will be observed with the German program and the German singing societies of Boston will take part. Concerts on July 13, also at 3.40 p. m., will be given at Marine park, South Boston, by the First Corps Coast Artillery band; at Jamaica pond by the Commonwealth band; at Franklin park by Kenrick's band; and at Wood Island park by Stone's military band.

Band concerts announced by the Metropolitan park commissioners for today are: Revere Beach, afternoon and evening, Lafranco's Military band; Nantasket Beach, afternoon and evening, Carter's band; Charles River road, Weymouth, 7.30 p. m., Eighth Regiment band.

At Union Park street, near Shawmut avenue, South End, the Municipal band will give a concert this evening.

GOV. TENER WILL TAKE PART IN ERIE PERRY CENTENARY

ERIE, Pa.—Governor Tener and Senator Boese Penrose are in Erie today to take part in the Perry centenary celebration, which lasts all the week.

The Tuesday program included a suffrage parade of women in the afternoon, which was cheered by thousands. With the women marched a large contingent of children drawing floats, which told the story of events of historical interest. Some, arrayed in the costumes of long ago, marched behind a little log schoolhouse mounted on wheels, a reproduction of the first building devoted to education erected in Erie.

Others represented the advancement of the community from the time Commodore Perry came to Erie, and another division was given over to the escort of the Women's Relief Corps.

POLICE END NATIVE STRIKE ON RAND BY SHOTS FIRED IN AIR

LONDON—The Rand is outwardly assuming a normal state of peace, but the discontent under the surface is undoubtedly very widespread. The attempt of the natives to imitate the white miners by striking was brought to a rapid conclusion. Nine thousand of them refused to return to work, but after the strike had fired over their heads the strike completely collapsed.

The colonial secretary read yesterday in the House of Commons a cable from Lord Gladstone, stating that large numbers of men were resuming work and that the home mills had already restarted. In over 50 mills of the reef, the cable went on, no serious collision had taken place between the troops and the strikers. Johannesburg had been the main center of disorder. In no case had the troops fired except where in Johannesburg the disorder was most serious. After the reading of the cable an attempt was made to move the adjournment of the House by Mr. Outhwaite, but this was ruled out of order by the speaker on the ground that any criticism would not be that of his majesty's government but of the Transvaal, and was out of order.

In the Transvaal a provincial council Labor member has given notice of a resolution condemning the action of Botha's government and demanding Lord Gladstone's recall.

DIGGS-CAMINETTI REPORT REJECTED

SAN FRANCISCO—Because it contained criticism of the course of President Wilson and Attorney-General McReynolds in connection with the resignation of United States District Attorney John L. McNab, the report of the federal grand jury before which was presented the evidence in the Diggs and Caminetti cases, the postponement of which led to Mr. McNab's resignation, was rejected Tuesday by Judge William C. Van Fleet in the United States district court.

Judge Van Fleet declared he would not permit the report as it stood to become a part of the court record. The court ordered that another report be submitted.

QUINCY BOARD OF TRADE HOLDS ANNUAL OUTING

QUINCY, Mass.—The Board of Trade is holding its annual outing today. The members gathered at the Adams building at 11:30 a. m., where lunch was served.

After an automobile tour through Wollaston, Norfolk Downs, Atlantic and Squantum, the party will visit the plant of the Quincy Column Turning Company. From there the members will call at the granite and polishing sheds and then visit the yard of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company and the power plant of the Bay State Street Railway Company. A fish dinner will be served later.

C. E. SOCIETY IS IN CONVENTION

LOS ANGELES—The Christian Endeavor Society is meeting in annual convention here. It is predicted that at least 13,000 persons from all civilized centers of the world, 7000 of them Californians, will take part in the convention.

William Shaw, general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, said strong efforts would be made in convention in Columbus, O., next November to combine all temperance societies. By concerted action, he said, it was hoped that constitutional prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor would be obtained. The society would have the United States "dry" before 1920 as a fitting observance of the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims.

BILLINGS COVE LEFT ASTERN BY EASTERN YACHTS

Yachtsmen Who Are Taking Part in Annual Cruise of 1913 Enjoy Fine Day's Sailing With No Racing Events on Program

VICTORY FOR ELENA

BILLINGS COVE, Me.—There was no racing by the Eastern Yacht Club fleet today. The fleet proceeded in cruising formation down Eggemoggin reach to Swan's island for an anchorage for the night.

At a captains' meeting it was decided on looking over the chart that there were too many "roaring bulls" and "brown cows" to risk the large schooners in a racing contest through Eggemoggin reach and Jericho bay. The sailing portion of the fleet was therefore tied together by stout tow lines and made the 15-mile run with the aid of steam and gasoline.

There has been very little wind, but the weather was very clear and the run down was fully as enjoyable as if under racing conditions. A number of the yachtsmen went outside of Marshall island on fishing excursions, but all were heading back into Swans island by mid-afternoon.

The Vagrant left for Portland today to prepare for her new trip abroad where Captain Vanderbilt expects to match his schooner against some of the English two-stickers. The cruise will finish tomorrow in a racing run around Great Duck island to Bar Harbor.

Tuesday's run from North Haven to this place was greatly enjoyed by all hands and resulted in a fine day's cruising for those boats which did not take part in the racing program and some fine competition for the racers.

Recent changes for the purpose of harmonizing the racing rules of the Eastern and Corinthian Yacht Clubs with those of the New York Yacht Club came up for discussion during the eastern cruise this year, especially the rules bearing on the question of appeal from racing decisions.

During the 1912 cruise it developed that the New York and the Eastern Yacht Club rules differed as to what constituted a starting line, or when a mark was not a mark. The Elena was disqualified last year for crowding the Irolita off the line and fouling her, the sailing master of the former boat having mistakenly thought that the New York rules were the same as the Eastern.

At the rules conference in New York last winter a Boston delegate representing the Eastern and Corinthian Yacht clubs was present, and as the result of that conference the rules of both the Massachusetts clubs were slightly altered. This year the rules of the Corinthian Yacht Club are practically the same as those which obtain in New York, but the rules of the Eastern, while agreeing on the matter of the status of the starting line, differ on the question of appeal from a race decision.

The Corinthian Yacht Club's racing rule No. 18, contains a provision that if a yacht owner is not satisfied with the interpretation of the rules by the regatta committee, he may appeal to a special meeting of the club, provided that flag officers of the club certify that there are reasonable grounds upon which to base such an appeal. In this case the club is constituted the court of last resort. A similar rule obtains in the New York Yacht Club, although 18 years ago the famous Defender-Valkyrie controversy was settled by a specially constituted court appointed by the New York Yacht Club.

The Eastern Yacht Club makes the regatta committee the court of last resort, and its rule 18, bearing on the right of protest, contains but two sections, while the Corinthian and New York Yacht Clubs have three, the third being the provision for the appeal to the club.

Many of the Eastern skippers hope that during the coming winter the club will insert the missing section. Such a provision would have no bearing on the coming German-American sloop races, which are to be sailed under special rules enforced by an international board of judges.

Tuesday night the fleet was nearly as large as that which anchored Monday night in North Haven, and Commodore Paine expects to maintain its full strength to the finish.

The winners in the racing events Tuesday were the schooners Elena and Shyessa IV and the sloops Shinnia and Vega. The greater portion of the summer colony of North Haven, made up largely of Bostonians, came out to the start at the eastern entrance to the thoroughfare. The wind was rather light for a time, but as the racing fleet got under way it breezed up and began hauling ahead. The racing event was a 23½-mile affair, eight miles down the bay to Saddleback and then 15½ miles up the bay to the finish off Hog island.

Ten yachts started, five schooners and five sloops. The Sakuntala and Narcissus did not start until five minutes after the schooners, but their elapsed times were figured with the Vega. Most of the yachts crossed the line with either balloons or No. 1 jib topsails, but as the entrance to the bay was

PLAY CONTINUES IN BIG SEABRIGHT TENNIS TOURNAMENT

W. M. Washburn of Harvard Springs Surprise by Defeating W. J. Clothier in Singles

SEABRIGHT, N. J.—Play is scheduled to continue today in both the singles and doubles divisions of the annual championship tournament of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club. The singles division has now reached the semi-final round with W. M. Washburn, Harvard; G. P. Gardner, Jr., the former Harvard athlete; T. R. Pell and G. F. Touchard, Long Island champion, as the contestants left.

Washburn sprung a surprise in the second round of singles Tuesday when he defeated former national champion W. J. Clothier of Philadelphia in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4. In view of Clothier's easy victory over R. Stevens Monday, the Philadelphia was picked to defeat Washburn in the second round, but the latter displayed splendid judgment and was very effective in his volleying.

The unexpected happened in the doubles, when Clothier and Gardner made a poor showing against Plummer and Bull. The first set was decided by a 6-2 score, but Clothier and Gardner put up a hard fight in the second set and appeared to have their opponents on the run, but the latter rallied and ran out the set and game, 9-7.

W. A. Larned, the seven-time national title-holder, made his first appearance in the doubles with G. L. Wrenn, Jr., as a running mate. The pair were drawn against W. M. Hall and H. Leroy, but the latter withdrew and H. Whitman and Lyle E. Mahan were substituted. Larned's lobbing was a conspicuous feature of the match, while Wrenn was strong in his volleying. They showed good team work and won in straight sets.

A big gallery witnessed the singles match between G. F. Touchard and A. S. Dabney, and fast tennis was played by both men. Dabney got the jump on the New York player before Touchard could get properly in his swing and carried off the first set. Touchard made the sets one all after a hard fight. The New Yorker improved in the third set and outplayed his opponent. The summary:

ACHILIS CHALLENGE CUP
Men's singles, first round—T. R. Pell defeated Lyle E. Mahan by default.
Second round—Watson M. Washburn defeated William J. Clothier, 6-4, 6-4; George Peabody Gardner, Jr., defeated Frederick C. Luman, 2-4, 6-3, 6-2; Gustave F. Touchard defeated Alfred S. Dabney, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3; T. R. Pell defeated Raymond D. Little, 6-1, 6-1.

MEN'S DOUBLES
First round—William A. Larned and George L. Wrenn, Jr., defeated H. Whitman and Lyle E. Mahan, 6-4, 6-2.
Second round—George M. Church and Dean Mathey defeated Watson M. Washburn and Gustave F. Touchard, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2; Howard A. Plummer and Charles M. Bull, Jr., defeated William J. Clothier and George Peabody Gardner, Jr., 6-2, 9-7.

LONDON TENNIS GREAT SUCCESS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The London championship meeting at Queens Club was, as usual, a great success. There was a large entry which included a number of well known players from foreign and colonial lands. Both the Canadian and South African Davis cup players played the first two or three days but these mostly retired, while Germany was represented by F. W. Rahe, H. Kleinschroth, and America by Messrs. Craig, Biddle and W. F. Johnson.

A number of well known English players were also on the cards, doubtless considering the tournament a good opportunity for practice for Wimbledon championship meeting. The gentlemen's singles for the championship of London were won by F. G. Lowe, who beat the United States representative W. F. Johnson in a splendid game in which the latter made a magnificent uphill struggle. The doubles were taken by the German pair, Rahe and Kleinschroth. The events were won as follows:

Gentlemen's singles, final—F. G. Lowe beat W. F. Johnson 7-5, 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4.
Ladies' singles, final—Mrs. D. R. Larcombe (holder) beat Mrs. H. Edgington, 6-2, 10-8.
Gentlemen's doubles, final—F. W. Rahe and H. Kleinschroth beat C. J. Tindell Green and J. F. H. Zimmerman, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.
Mixed open doubles, final—C. P. Dixon and Mrs. Larcombe beat "W. Alfred" and Mrs. O'Neill, 6-3, 6-4.

near the wind edged around to west-southwest and baby jib topsails were substituted.

Most of the yachts broke out balloon jib topsails in the run up the bay, although the Shinnia and Dorello boomed out their spinnakers well forward of the beam.

The wind gave the sailing cruisers of the fleet a chance to follow the race the greater part of the distance and reach the night's anchorage several hours before dinner time.

Nearly all the yachtsmen went on shore later in the afternoon for a tramp over the roads of Sargentville and a visit to some of its country stores. The summary:

BOSTON TAKES FIRST GAME

The Boston Nationals won the first game of their series with St. Louis Tuesday by the score of 6 to 2, and opened a long season at home. Griner's unsteady work in the seventh and a two base hit by Rariden gave the locals five runs, and made the victory sure. Tyler pitched for Boston, and had the visiting players under control at all times. The score:

GIANTS WIN THIRTEENTH

NEW YORK—The New York Giants ran their winning number up to 13 games Tuesday, when they took the first game of the Chicago series by a score of 6 to 5. Lavender, who broke Marquard's sequence of victories a year ago, pitched a strong game for the visitors, but he received poor support, especially in the seventh inning, when New York scored four runs. Chicago hit Tesreau hard and freely and their four runs in the sixth inning were made on clean hitting, two doubles and three singles. Marquard pitched the last two innings for New York, and held the visitors without a hit. The score:

Innings: 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 R.H.E.

MAY HAVE ANOTHER TRIAL

NEW YORK—Owing to a claim that the sail area on the canoe of J. E. Newman, which has been selected to represent the United States in the challenge match with R. B. Britton of Canada for the international trophy, is said to be too large, a special trial race may be ordered today between Newman and L. Friede, his alternate. The cup committee met Tuesday afternoon and decided to have the first of the challenge races start at 2:30 Friday afternoon.

CAPABLANCA IN THE LEAD

NEW YORK—J. R. Capablanca of Havana played his third game in the masters' tournament of the Rice Chess club Tuesday afternoon against J. Bernstein, whom he defeated in a queen's pawn opening after 29 moves. Capablanca played very quickly, consuming only 17 minutes to his opponent's one hour and 10 minutes. Capablanca now leads the field with a score of 3 to 0.

ENGLAND WINS FROM SCOTLAND

(Special to the Monitor)

LIVERPOOL, Eng.—The international match between teams of professional golfers representing England and Scotland took place recently on the links of the Royal Liverpool Club at Hoylake and attracted a very large crowd of spectators. This match is a prelude to the open championship, but on two occasions within recent years it was abandoned for various causes.

The teams selected for the international were fairly representative of both countries. The Scottish side was captained by George Duncan, while P. J. Gaudin of Fulwell had that distinction in connection with the English team. In the result of the match England had again an easy victory, winning on the singles by 9 matches to 3 and on the foursomes by 5 to 1, the aggregate being England 13, Scotland 4. In the nine matches which have been played since this fixture was inaugurated, England has won five, Scotland one and three drawn. The course was in very good order, although the greens were exceedingly keen, and the long grass punished sliced or pulled tee shots.

BASEBALL PICKUPS

Thirteen straight for the Giants. It is now a question of what team will be the first to break the winning streak.

President Navin of the Detroit Americans announces that he has no intention of letting Vitt leave that team, reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

The American league starts in again today and chief interest will be centered in the Cleveland-Philadelphia game, as these teams are the leaders in that race.

Miller's home run in the tenth inning of the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia game won for his team yesterday. There were two men on the bases at the time. Cravath of Philadelphia made his tenth home run of the season.

POWERS RESIGNS POSITION

WORCESTER—J. Fred Powers, athletic director in the East park playgrounds, has resigned his position to take up his duties as coach of field athletics at Harvard University. Powers will occupy the position formerly held by William Quinn, who had great success with the Harvard athletes for a number of years.

MOTOR BOATS IN ANOTHER TEST FOR AMERICAN TEAM

HUNTINGTON, N. Y.—Another test race is scheduled for today for the aspirants for the three places on the team of motor boats which will go to England this summer to represent the United States in the challenge races for the international trophy now held by Great Britain, following the victory of the Maple Leaf in the 1912 series here.

The first real test was given the boats Tuesday. J. Stuart Blackton's newest high-speed motorboat, the Speed Demon Reliance, won easily in the first elimination race, as Commodore Blackton's other new boat, the America of the Viper sea-seal type, and the Peter Pan V., owned by James Simpson, both cracked their cylinders and had to retire.

The Speed Demon Reliance broke no records, but she covered the 30-mile course in 50 minutes 43 seconds, which is at the mean speed of 35.491 knots, or 40.813 statute miles. Her best two rounds of five miles each were done in seven minutes 58 seconds, which is at the rate of 37.65 knots. Her other four rounds were done in 8 minutes 4 seconds, 8 minutes 5 seconds, 8 minutes 25 seconds and 10 minutes 13 seconds. She broke a gasoline pipe in the last round.

The Peter Pan V. covered four rounds of the course at a consistent speed. Her average was 35.31 knots, or 40.606 miles. The America's speed for two rounds was 31.82 knots, or 36.593 miles. The same boats are to start in tomorrow's race.

Count Casimir Mankowski, owner of the motorboat Ankle Deep, who was an interested spectator at the finish said that he would bring his boat over from City Island and start her in the race today.

AMERICAN CYCLISTS WIN

In the first international motor-paced bicycle race between French and American riders ever held on the Revere track, James F. Moran and Worth Mitten, his riding partner, defeated Caesar Simar and Julien Rudolphe of Paris, 9 points to 7. Moran defeated Rudolphe in a five-mile race, Mitten defeated Simar in a similar event and Moran defeated the entire field in the final heat at 15 miles, winning the individual honors.

AERIAL BRIDGE NEAR LIVERPOOL

THE necessity for bridges sufficiently high to allow of the unobstructed passage of large steamers, led to the invention of the transporter bridge by Charles Smith in the year 1872. Although somewhat resembling a suspension bridge no road passes over it, but instead it forms a railway on which runs a trolley supporting a car. The car conveys pedestrians, cyclists, and motorists from one bank to the other. At Runcorn, about 14 miles from Liverpool, the transporter bridge shown in the photograph crosses the Mersey. It is 60 feet above high water level, with a span of 1000 feet. This bridge and one at Newport in Wales, across the river Usk, were the two first transporters to be built in the United Kingdom, having been erected in 1902-6.

Rights of All

Only they who lose all find all; only they know the joy of triumph and the grace of exaltation. Every homeless brother challenges the validity of my title; every sorrowing sister rebukes my Christless complacency, and every neglected child smites my conscience in the name of humanity. Not until all are fed are any fed; not until all are sheltered are any sheltered; not until all are free are any free; not until all are civilized are any civilized.—Eugene Debs.

the Aegean. Seaweeds along the shore are few, because, I suppose, a foreshore of rock is missing. There are a few brown ribbons of wet, slippery strips of green with crumpled edges, but none of the dainty pink fronds and rosy lace-work that one finds where tongues of low rock run out into the tide. There are queer finger-sponges here, veritable sponges drawn out into long tubes as thick as a baby's finger set like branching stag-horns on a base of pebble or shell and there are starfish strewn among the sponges, five-pointed, bristly, each one adorned with a scarlet dot where two rays join.

The Fruit Rancher.

He sees the rosy apples cling like flowers to the bough;
He plucks the purple plums and spills the cherries on the grass;
He wanted peace and silence—God gives him plenty now—
His feet upon the mountain and his shadow on the pass.

He built himself a cabin from red cedars of his own;
He blasted out the stumps and twitched the boulders from the soil;
And with an ax and chisel he fashioned out a throne
Where he might dine in grandeur off the first-fruits of his toil.

He shouts across the valley, and the ranges answer back;
His brushwood smoke at evening lifts a column to the moon;
And dim beyond the distance, where the Kootenai winds black,
He hears the silence shattered by the laughter of the loon.

Baton Rouge

Baton Rouge, which is just now greatly elated over its growing importance as an ocean port, was one of the earliest French settlements in Louisiana, says National Waterways (magazine). As a part of what was then West Florida, it passed into the hands of the British in 1763, and in 1779 was captured by the Spanish Governor of Louisiana. Later, it again passed into possession of the French, by whom it was transferred to the United States. The city, which was incorporated in 1817, became the state capital in 1849 and remained so until 1862, when it was captured by the Union forces, and Shreveport became the Confederate state capital. In 1882 the capital came back to Baton Rouge. The population in 1910 was 14,807.

Love Is the Key

It is service that counts, not position; I do not for one moment wish to dishearten any one from having a purpose and aim in life, it is quite right that we should; but I say this, let us put the right things in the right order, and live for the highest, noblest, and the best; that our own lives shall be our testimony to the religion that we believe in, the religion of love, the example of Christ, whose whole life was spent in doing good to others, as it was said of him, "He saved others; himself he cannot save." Life is a grand and a glorious thing; live, therefore, in harmony with its divine music and you will understand more clearly the problem of Life, for to love unselfishly is the key.—Stanley J. Dark.

ROWBOATING ON A JUNE MORNING

THE bluffs of the opposite bank were wooded with high trees. The sun shone softly on their leaves, and the bright stream was ruffled by a breeze that bent all the reeds and slowly swayed the water flowers. One thin white line of wind streaked the blue sky. He shipped his sculls, says a description in Scribner's magazine, and drifted, listening to the wood-pigeons, watching the swallows chasing. Her cottage lay on the same side as the village, just beyond an island. She had told him of a hedge of yew-trees, and a white dove-cote almost at the water's edge. Soon he came to the island, and

Longfellow's Blue Frock Coat

Dr. James C. White, whose diary kept during his Harvard career in the fifties is being published in the Harvard Graduate Magazine, says of Longfellow, then a teacher there: "He is charming in every way, the best-dressed of our teachers, a blue frock coat, gay waistcoat, light trousers, large bright neck handkerchief, side whiskers, and a winning smile."

He notes the many famous names among the professors, such as Professors Walker, Longfellow, Felton, Peirce, Lovering, Jeffries Wyman, Agassiz, Gray, Child, Lane, and Cooke. "With such men," he says, "we were in constant and intimate relations as pupils after our freshman year. Can it be wondered at that we loved the college and remain satisfied and thankful that we received such a training as such men gave us?"

Rights Overstepped

The chief of the village fire brigade enters without undue haste into a picture in "Life" and the following colloquy ensues:

"You're too late, chief. Lige and I put it out."
"Well you had no right to. You knew we were coming."

Wagner's Art-Work

Everywhere Wagner now plays first fiddle, in the concert halls no less than in the opera houses, says the New York Post. The surest way to fill an auditorium is to announce a Wagner program, even though he wrote so few pieces for the concert hall that his operas have to be drawn on for the purpose. Plainly, much is lost by thus dissociating the music from the action, and scenery; but if the public is satisfied with half a loaf of Wagner and prefers it to a whole loaf of other bread, what is to be done?

Truth to tell, even those who enjoy Wagner's art work in the opera house fall far short, as a rule, of understanding its full significance; particularly the subtle interdependence of the poetry and the music. Thousands to whom these operas have become old stories would be astonished, awed, and thrilled as never before if they could once distinctly hear every word that is sung and note how it is mirrored in the music, bar by bar. When Wagner brought out his "Tannhauser" in Dresden he was disappointed because the audiences seemed to be more impressed by its operatic melodies in the olden style than by its musico-dramatic innovations. The fault, to be sure, was not all on the part of the hearers; the singers and the players, too, were groping in the dark, dazed by a style that was new to them. That was in 1845. He had outstripped his generation; but instead of waiting for it to catch up with him, his astonishing originality impelled him to compose his "Tristan" and his "Nibelung's Ring," in which he advanced beyond "Tannhauser" and "Lohengrin" by as big a stride as that which separated those works from the old-fashioned operas.

Just Begun

Oh, open wide life's portals,
Then throw the portals wide.
Let pass this grave procession
Which moves with stately pride;
Not pride that weakly conscious
Boasts loud, now all is done,
But pride in the conviction
That wisdom's just begun.
—Bertha Hirsch Barnich in West Coast magazine.

"AS HE THINKETH IN HIS HEART"

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

AMONG the passages in Holy Writ that are often alluded to is the one which the writer of the book of Proverbs indited concerning a man: "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Notwithstanding the popularity of this passage, can it be said that it is generally understood in its fullest and deepest sense? Can it be said too that the majority of men and women today really are cognizant of the fact that it is their own individual thinking which directly or indirectly, actuates and governs them and makes them what they are? Shakespeare says, "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." This statement, we see, harmonizes with the one quoted from Proverbs, both showing plainly that it is thought which is the all-important thing, the thing which must be considered and reckoned with on every side.

People in general always have been quite ready to admit that their own thoughts originated and controlled some of their conditions, but they have not been ready to admit that their own thoughts have had direct bearing upon all of their conditions. They always have been ready to analyze and correct, in a greater or less degree, certain thoughts in order that certain conditions might be analyzed and corrected, but the more subtle, enslaving and harmful thoughts and conditions have, as a rule, been allowed comparatively free rein. This is because individuals have not really known and understood that as they think or believe in their hearts, so are they.

Nearly fifty years ago, one lone woman, All the World at Beck and Call of Modiste

An amusing screed on the subject of absurdities in woman's dress is Richard Burton's in the Bellman. He sees the dressmaker as the absolute tyrant in modern times. She may decree what monstrosities she will, what extravaganzas, what positive discomfort, or worse, for her devotees. Manufacturers and merchants and workmen all alike are her slaves. When she decrees scanty skirts factories close for lack of employment; and when she says thumbs down to the mill season stock of blouses has to be sold out at less than cost. She is the one representative of labor who has no grievance. She has everything her own way. The tailor must have his garments ready on time or face loss of patronage if not a suit of a different sort. The dressmaker revels in broken promises—so Mr. Burton seems to think.

Indeed the tyranny of the modiste does seem to be such that no woman can make headway against her. If a woman tries to stand out against the dictum of fashion not only other women but the very men who most decry the folly of fashion look down on her and think she is faddy and queer. To receive consideration in the world a woman must be a servant of the modiste. One may admire a woman's accomplishments, her capacities, her good works, but if her general appearance is out of tune with the fancy of the hour she is subjected to other people's condescensions. This is so generally received a fact that women who have various reforms most deeply at heart today are forced to give more serious attention than they ever did before to the question of dress. The higher their successes mount, the more they are in the public eye. Once let the public eye catch them out of step with fashion's battalions, and the most successful and advanced of womankind today may lose her prestige and the fruits of her most unselfish labors.

Here is food for reflection on the part of fashion's slaves and her critics as well.

Doing Good

Do not only take occasions of doing good when they are thrust upon you; but study how to do all the good you can, as those that are "zealous of good works." Zeal of good works will make you plot and contrive for them; consult and ask advice for them; it will make you glad when you meet with a hopeful opportunity; it will make you do it largely and not sparingly and by the halves; it will make you do it speedily, without unwilling backwardness and delay; it will make you do it constantly.—Richard Baxter.

WITHOUT A WORD TOO MANY

TO SAY what one has to say without a word too many or too few is the acme of literary art. A word that has no place in the mental fact before the writer's eyes has no place on his page. It is this sheer statement of the thing-as-it-is which makes the charm of George Borrow's writing at its best. Just so people speak. In just such simple vernacular he himself thinks. Or at any rate just so his thoughts at last appear to him after he has stripped away every shred of useless linguistic lingo. It is something of this same sheer saying the thing itself which one feels in the writing of George Moore. Witness the following passage from the preface of his "Impressions and Opinions." He takes the reader into his confidence and tells the thing just as it was. We read:

"A publisher will not bring out a new edition without a preface, and we find prefaces difficult to write. Three weeks were spent on the preface to 'Spring Days,' for a long screed had been contemplated containing many new and ingenious theories of literature; but as these did not seem to prepare the reader's mind for the book he was going to read, an anecdote was substituted, and a hundred newspapers related that the author had bought up and pilfered as many copies of the original edition as he could, and had thrown them into the Thames. We have nothing so picturesque to tell in the present preface, but merely that the author was sinking in a flood of public disfavor caused by 'Spring Days' and the book that followed 'Spring Days' (its name we fear to pronounce), when 'Impressions and Opinions,' like a Newfoundland dog, dived after him and brought him to shore.

"And all that we have to tell of the further career of this book is that it seems to have retained the admiration it first inspired, and to have made more friends in the last 20 years. Those who read us and do not possess this book seem anxious to possess it, and those who do possess the book will not part from it except at extravagant price. We have heard of three pounds ten shillings being asked for a copy and when it became necessary to procure one for the preparation of this edition we were asked 50 shillings. It would have been distasteful to us to spend so much money on our own writings. The story got about and the book was brought to us one morning in a basket. Our butcher's son had been collecting our writings for some years, and had slipped it in with the beef; and looking at the copy which had come to us in so unexpected a way, we see that we may attribute to David Nutt the great store set upon the first edition of 'Impressions and Opinions.' A book's first life, it is true, depends on its contents, but two or three years after publication the pagination, the print, the paper, the cover and the shape of the book begin to attract, and year by year they attract more and more until the book attains the glory of a Chinese vase in which there is nothing but a little dust."

Man and Nature

Man is incomprehensible without nature, and nature is incomprehensible apart from man. For the delicate loveliness of the flower is as much in the human eye as in its own fragile petals, and the splendor of the heavens as much in the imagination that kindles at the touch of their glory as in the shining of countless worlds.—Hamilton Wright Mabie.

Shoeing the Geese

In some places where a great many geese are raised and sold there is a queer custom which we read about in Little Folks. When it is time to take the geese to market they have to be "shoed" for the long walk, as we speak of horses being shod. But not just the same way, either. For the shoes are put on the geese in this funny way: A bed of tar is made and when it is still warm, the geese are walked around in it. The tar sticks to their feet. Then they are turned out on to a big pile of sand and the sand sticks to the tar. The sand and tar harden in such a way that the funny shoes last all through the long walk to market. We have all heard of "shoeing" geese; but this is another way to do it.

In this story a man who is working on a house has told the little girl about the goose shoes and given her a little Portland cement to play with. While it is still soft she puts it on the soles of her little shoes. By and by when her brothers come to look for her she is standing quite still in the middle of a side street. The cement has hardened and her feet are stuck fast to the pavement. They unbutton her shoes and lift her out of them and then they have a hard tug to get the shoes loose.

The Lesson of Morocco

IN ALL languages, the world over, are to be found sayings, long since passed into proverbs, which set it forth as a basal certainty that human thought will ultimately turn against oppression and wrong in all directions, no matter how patiently or passively it may seem to endure for the time. "Even the worm will turn." Every period of history is full of instances in the case of an individual or in the case of a people, where conditions long viewed as inevitable and silently acquiesced in, have been suddenly seen in a better and truer light. At that moment the rising to resist has always begun, and has always eventuated in the overthrowing of the wrong and its replacement by something nearer right.

The present entanglement of three great powers in Morocco is fast arousing the national consciousness, in all three nations concerned, to the existence of a great wrong, namely, the extent to which much that is of first importance to them is controlled by a few men, against whose decision there is no appeal. The present wholly artificial and dangerously unstable position in Morocco was all planned and arranged, in its every detail, seven years ago, and for fully five years the tens of millions of people whom it affected, who might at any moment have been called to uphold it with their lives and fortunes, knew nothing of its existence. It very nearly involved all Europe in a war the effect of which no one could estimate. It clothed anew with a semblance of reason a wholly unreasonable estrangement between two great nations, and it remains at this moment still a menace to the peace of the world.

It was not the work of the people of any of the three countries, but of a few diplomatists and a few financiers, and the motives with which it was entered upon, the methods by which it was carried into effect, were only revealed to be bitterly condemned by the millions who were ignorantly committed to their indorsement. "Democracy and foreign affairs" is already a question. For centuries the people of all nations have been taught to leave the conduct of their foreign affairs in the hands of, not a chosen few, but of a specially trained and almost hereditary few. They have learned to regard that province of politics as a "mystery of state," and to acquiesce without question in the findings of those within the circle.

Here, however, as in so many other directions, there is a change observable. The Moroccan crisis of 1911 swept away forever from French politics the secret treaty. In England and Germany it called into being a large body of public opinion which is working night and day to effect the same change in these countries. If the present crisis in Morocco should result in the breakdown of the status quo, it is hard to imagine the possibility of any reconstruction which would not involve a demand on the part of the democracy of all three countries concerned for a greater control over their foreign policy.

THE MISSISSIPPI is now engaged in turning one of the largest of modern turbines, thereby diffusing light and distributing power over a large area of its valley. This may, in the long run, be better than turning stern wheels, but the stream will not look quite right until boats shall once more be seen coming round its bends.

British Columbia Merchant Marine

VANCOUVER and British Columbia in general have reason to congratulate themselves over the outlook of their shipping trade. In a recent article in the Monitor touching on the matter, and touching also on the American merchant marine situation, all sorts of theories regarding ocean commerce were set aside and the facts were frankly and freely set forth. Canada and the United States are in many respects on the same plane with regard to shipping. The United States was once the possessor of a fleet of merchantmen. Canada never did cut much of a figure on the high seas. And while the United States has been giving up its thought to theories and its time to debate as to what steps it should and should not take with the view of restoring its merchant marine, Canada has been content, rather, to build up its ports, trusting the commerce of the world to seek them when it seemed to its interest so to do.

Recently certain American ports that had been lagging have awakened to the wisdom of the Canadian policy. At least one American port did not need to awaken to it, because it had never dozed. That port today is in the world's commercial leadership. It has reached that point by doing what the Canadian ports have done, what other American ports are now doing—that is, by letting the merchant marine question and all of its economic technicalities alone and taking care of its harbors, its docks and its terminals. A merchant marine, as Canada has determined for itself, cannot be argued into existence, but a great commerce may be induced by catering to its needs.

Vermont Misses Her Due Recognition

MAINE gets more vacation visitors than any other state in New England, has more money invested in summer hotel and residential properties, is the field of the largest annual expenditure of outing money. All New England is a summer pleasure ground. Maine's easy preeminence does not deprive the other states of their importance. The splendid coast of Massachusetts, her Cape Cod, her Berkshires, her Connecticut valley, do not fail of appeal. New Hampshire is not rivaled in her possession of the White mountains and the roads traveled by pleasure seekers center there and reach out to the many lakes. Rhode Island, all shore, Connecticut, shore and inland, have their claims recognized. But Vermont remains to be discovered. The one all-inland state, she has been passed by in the pleasure migration from west to east. Her appeal is of hills and lakes, but therein is her opportunity, not her disadvantage. What she lacks is recognition.

That the people of the state are not indifferent to the presentation of her charms to the outside world, with the thought of attracting its pleasure and recreation seekers, is shown by the note of resentment that runs through her newspaper columns when it is discovered that she is made the object of real neglect by some agency of travel. The wide variety of Vermont's attractions, the lakes, the hills, which while grand are not great beyond the possibility of intimate acquaintance, the Connecticut valley, which Presidents have been only too slow in discovering, the Champlain region—here is one of the nation's complete pleasure regions, lacking nothing in restfulness for those who seek quiet nor in challenge to the explorers of woods and climbers of hills. It is not that it is remote, inaccessible, unreachable by highways of steel and those of gravel. It is simply because Vermont is undiscovered that she takes a far less commanding place in her call to the summer visitation.

CHICAGO is confronted with the garbage problem in its acute stage, which is, perhaps, just as well for Chicago. The garbage problem would have been satisfactorily solved long ago in many communities were it not for the pains taken to compromise with it.

NOW THAT the C. O. D. postal parcel is likely to arrive at any moment it becomes more necessary than ever to keep some ready money in the sewing machine drawer.

INSTEAD of legislating toward the relief of consumers of anthracite coal, the Legislature of Pennsylvania, it appears, recently imposed a revenue tax of 2½ per cent upon the value of that commodity at the mine, the effect of which will be to further advance the exorbitant charges made for this kind of fuel. The coal operators, as is now generally known, reaped an immense profit from the advance in wages they allowed the miners in settlement of the last strike in the anthracite region. They found in this advance—in this concession to labor—what they regarded as justification for an advance in the price of coal out of all proportion to the increased demand upon their revenues. By adding to the price per ton to the consumer they earned a profit on the wage increase that ran into the millions.

Pennsylvania legislators may know that corporate interests shift taxes ostensibly imposed upon them to the shoulders of the consumer. It is reported that the first step has already been taken in this direction for the tax has been added, as a plus charge, in bills rendered to shippers by the mine owners. The consumer, at present the victim of a scale arbitrarily fixed for his exploitation, may, or he may not, rise in protest. Whether he does or not, or whether the mine operators and their friends in politics shall continue to add straws to the breaking point, are not matters comparable in importance with the question whether the country's sense of what is equitable and just shall long continue to tolerate a system under which such methods are possible. Fuel is as necessary to millions of people in the United States at certain seasons as food and shelter, and it is against sound public policy that private interests should be able to manipulate it at will, and on every flimsy pretext.

Inpouring of Precious Stones

AT REGULAR intervals during the last fiscal year reports from the New York custom house and from other sources have indicated constantly growing receipts in this country of gems of every description. One record after another has been broken. It would seem at times as if the United States had become a purchaser of the surplus stones of Europe and the east, the leading patron of the diamond mines and pearl fisheries. However, the gain during the last twelve months although considerable has not altogether overshadowed the transactions of previous years. During the year ending on June 30, 1913, the total value of gem importations into the United States was $48,988,997. This breaks all records, but the value of the gem importations for 1910 was $44,885,057, and the average importations for some years have been close to the last named figure.

Only a very wealthy nation could absorb this annual supply, and the fact that the United States does absorb it upsets once more a pet theory of the moderate pessimists. These have been holding of late that the demand for automobiles has been exhausting a surplus that formerly went into other luxuries. It has been contended, that is, that the market for art and art goods, for fine furnishings, for fine clothing, and for jewelry, has been seriously affected by the automobile. Inquiry into the condition of the other lines mentioned fails to substantiate this; the facts presented by the custom house bulletins on gem importations are sufficient to controvert the theory that the automobile exhausts the allowance for precious stones.

It seems to be the case that variation in the nature of expenditure running even into the hundreds of millions does not influence appreciably the general business of the country. Thus, vast amounts may be diverted from old into new channels without affecting the trend or stability of trade as a whole. The telephone, the automatic musical instrument, the moving picture show; improved devices in office furnishings, including the typewriter, have all called and are all calling for as great a diversion of expenditure from old lines as the automobile or the diamond, pearl, sapphire and ruby. The law of compensation enters into the whole matter. Extraordinary outlays, at least, now as ever, seem to be balanced by extraordinary incomes, taking into account big and little transactions the world over.

DAYTON, O., has a high school especially for first year pupils, its aim being "to carry the pupil past the gap intervening between the grammar and high schools and to develop an appreciation of the value of a complete education." This may be an improvement upon the ninth grade plan. If so, other cities will doubtless adopt it.

IT HAS BEEN decided by a committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce to recommend the preservation of pioneer names in street nomenclature. This is commendable. Every American city should have a vigilance committee for the protection of its old street names.

IN THE meantime, literary recognition is not diverting Indiana from attention to the practical. Her coal output this year is expected, to break all records.

Increasing Tax on Coal Consumers

THAT one of the leading stockmen of Texas is at the head of a company organized for the purpose of importing several hundred head of camels from Asia with the idea of employing them as carriers in the arid and semi-arid districts of the Southwest, is a fact, apparently, entirely unrelated to the movement, much discussed a year or two ago, having in view the transportation of various wild animals from other continents and their domestication in the mountain and desert lands of the United States. Behind the latter project is, or was, the idea of raising animals for commercial purposes, using territory now practically unused. Behind the former is the idea of obtaining for the great sandy wastes of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California draft animals capable of assisting in the development of mineral properties. The drifting of the sands—the sandstorms and the heat—of the southwestern deserts combine to render them either wholly or partly inaccessible.

It is recalled that over 50 years ago the government at Washington gave serious thought to a plan for importing camels to be used in this region, and that about 40 of them were actually brought over from Asia. But the object in view was characteristic of the period and very different from that which moves the Texas enterprise. It was thought then that the camel would be of great aid to the soldiers on the plains in their campaign against the Indians. The civil war ensued, the camel enterprise fell out of sight, some of the animals were sold, others were allowed to run loose, and down even to the cowboy period stray humped animals were occasionally seen on the plains. The present project, although it cannot be entirely freed from the romantic in the thought of many, is purely and prosaically industrial. The aptitude of the camel for the work that needs to be done are the facts that constitute the incentive, and not at all the oriental picturesqueness his presence will lend to the great sagebrush and alkali stretches which, though repellent in their barrenness, contain in various forms undeveloped wealth that appeals unceasingly to enterprise.

IN ENGLISH-SPEAKING countries, as in lands where other languages are spoken, there are certain feminine, and also certain masculine, first names that never will go out of style. These, of course, include practically the entire list of Scriptural names. Speaking here of the feminine more particularly, Sarah, Ruth, Mary, Martha, and others that will at once occur to the reader, are rooted deeply in the world's affections, although they may take on somewhat different forms in different countries. Some of these names, as, for instance, the English Mary, the German Maria and the French Marie are differentiated in sound only by characteristic national dialects. Margaret is another name that can be traced practically through the nomenclature of all languages. But, especially with regard to English feminine names, there are certain originals and derivatives that from time to time have come in and gone out, disappeared and returned, like fashions in general.

One does not need to go back very far in literature to find Nan and Peggy and Matilda and Maria (English style) and Kittie and Nancy and Betty and Betsy and Molly and Polly, all playing conspicuous parts. A little farther back Judy, Delia and Caroline may be found well in the lead. A little closer to our time there was a period of Henriettas, Anastasias, Juliets, Clarettes, etc., indicating that the French romantic school held sway in names as in other respects. Let it be said to the credit of the colonial states of America that, as a rule, they have not been moved by fads and fancies in feminine names. They have clung, for example, to such good old names as Dorothy, Hannah, Dora, Ann, Alice, Ruth, Margaret, Maria, Maryanne, Jane, Bertha, etc., to say nothing of the Puritan list, including Faith, Hope, Charity, Prudence, Priscilla, etc., and they have been periodically rewarded, as they are being rewarded just now, by seeing the style in names come around again to them.

It is said by those who have been giving the matter some thought that a complete return to the old names of women is at hand, and that the coming generation will see the old-fashioned stock in general use. It will be a pleasing experience, even though it will be followed again by the usual variations until the original is almost lost, and until the adoption of extremes in "ettes," and "essies" and "izzies" shall again force a return to the simple nomenclature of the mothers.

A CENSUS of children playing in the streets of New York city at a given hour of a given day last April was taken by the People's Institute. Not less than 120,000 urban folk of tender years were found to be venting that feeling of joy and hope which poets say is characteristic of juveniles under adverse conditions. The record of the social investigators indorses the belief of the poets. Inner impulse counts for more than environment, and hence more children were found busy playing clean, improving and wholesome games than were not so engaged. Cramped and untoward as their surroundings were the players initiated and carried on the traditional sports and pastimes begun generations ago when most American lads and maidens came along rural lanes to get knowledge in "the little red schoolhouse."

The lesson of this inquiry, of course, is not that the city street is the best playground imaginable for the child or that the playground movement is an extravagance based on sentiment. On the contrary it is that, awaiting the ideal playground, there are a lot of young folks with instincts that on the whole are good and that make them loyal to games calling for teamwork, courage, fair play and self-respect.

The greatest need is not ethical. Amplitude is lacking and also natural settings which may refine onlookers during the leisure moments between sports. New York has been sensible in her decision to utilize her parks for playground purposes; and no one reading the record of the Fourth of July celebration in the metropolis, with its detail of sports municipally conducted in which 25,000 athletes from the public schools competed, can but be impressed with the contrast it presents to the older method of handling city youth on the anniversary of the nation's natal day. Couple with this the increasing use of folklore dancing and pageants given by school children at all American holiday functions, and it is easy to see how beneficent the effects of the movement away from the old practise are to be.
